Leaders Map Steps to Ease U. S. Problem Of Work, Jobs

Roosevelt Asks Business to Hire Those Over 40, and the Unskilled.

Johnson Firm Head Asks Law on Hours

Chester, Manufacturers' Chief, Would Abolish Child Labor.

By William V. Neusly.

Marked by a Presidential appeal that industry employ more older workers and unskilled labor, a rapid-fire series of activities in the interest of the Nation's workers came in quick succession yesterday from various parts of the country.

In the background also was an apparent determination on both sides to grapple with and overcome the complex difficulties in the way of more cordial relations and heartier co-operation between Government and business.

Quickly following President Roosevelt's appeal on behalf of workers more than 40 years old and of the unskilled, were these developments:

Robert W. Johnson, president of Johnson & Johnson surgical dressing firm, called for the fixing of maximum work hours for all classes of labor, by constitutional amendment if necessary.

C. N. Chester, president of the National Association of Manufacturers, suggested the end of all child labor, help for school graduates to find work, fair wages, vacations with pay for hour workers if possible and private handling of problems due to death, disability, old age and unemployment.

A move to re-establsh the Government's power to set minimum wage and labor standards gained strength in both houses of Congress.

The Business Advisory Council gathered here to discuss with Secretary of Commerce Roper today the Administration's aims and possible steps to attain the "fundamental principles" of NRA.

Committees of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States were completing reports for a board meeting tomorrow on unemployment, Federal finances and similar subjects.

Secretary Perkins revealed plans for a conference of labor leaders on legislation for the next session of Congress.

Roosevelt Cites Gains.

Mr. Roosevelt pointed out in his statement that rapid increases in reemployment have reduced by 28 per cent, between January and August, the number of unemployed families and single persons on relief. The total was given as 5,916,000 at the start of the year. The "large number" still unemployed, he said, are to a large extent unskilled "and a disportionately large number are older workers—40 years and over. He added that "the sharpest revival in employment has been among skilled workers and relatively young workers."

He said the policy of many large industries of not hiring workers over 40 "condemns many in this group of workers to permanent unemployment," since long continued unemployment for the older workers results "sooner or later in unemployability." This, he pointed out, "means a permanent problem of support, and the burden of support is carried ultimately in large measure by industry itself."

To Best Interests.

"It is to the best interests of industry," the statement continued, "to recognize its responsibility, not only by substantially increasing employment, but by employing those in groups where many are now supported by public funds. Industry can adjust its hiring policies so as to cause the speediest reduction in the real social burden of unemployment. This means giving a fair share of the new jobs to the workers over 40 and to expand opportunities for the hiring of unskilled workers."

The President made his appeal in connection with a warning that Congress would be asked for enough

On the Road to Madrid—Moorish Warriors Lead Advance on Capital

Mgr. Corrigan Made Rector Of Catholic U.

Princes of Church in Crowd of 5,000 at Ceremonies.

With solemn dignity, the Right Rev. Joseph Moran Corrigan, S. T. D., yesterday was inaugurated rector of the Catholic University of America at impressive services made colorful by the presence of red-robed leaders of the Catholic Church from all parts of the Nation.

After the princes of the church—Patrick Cardinal Hayes and Dennis Cardinal Dougherty—prayed for his success and called upon all Catholics to lend him their support, Mgr. Corrigan accepted his papal appointment from the Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore and chancellor of the university.

The services were held before more than 5,000 persons in the gymnasium of the university. In the audience were diplomatic representatives of 23 foreign countries, delegates of more than 300 institutions of higher learning, high-ranking officials of the Federal Government, members of the 53 religious houses affiliated with the university and prominent alumni of the university and lay members of the church.

Cablegram From Pope.

At the conclusion of the exercises the Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, apostolic delegate to the United States, read a cablegram from Rome which said Pope Pius XI "prays that divine light and strength may enable him (Mgr. Corrigan) to lead the university to new heights."

Mgr. Cicognani at the direction of the Holy See bestowed the apostolic benediction upon all who participated in the ceremonies.

Two honorary degrees of doctor of laws were conferred during the inauguration ceremonies. One went to Associate Justice Pierce Butler, of the United States Supreme Court, and the other was conferred upon the Right Rev. Michael J. Lavelle, 80-year-old vicar general of the archdiocese of New York. Both received their citations from the archbishop without comment.

Seldom had so many high-ranking dignitaries of the Catholic Church in America joined in tribute to one

Facing Nine Duels, Doctor Practices With Heavy Saber

Budapest, Nov. 18 (AP).—Dr. Franz Sargas spent a strenuous 12 hours today getting ready for his nine duels scheduled for Monday.

The strict Hungarian code, because of the unprecedented number of simultaneous challenges, was broken in his case to allow postponement of the duels, originally scheduled for today.

The 28-year-old doctor spent several hours this morning with his lawyer settling his own affairs and those of his wife, whose honor he charged was impugned as well as his own by the nine men he challenged. Then he spent several perspiring hours practicing in his club for the duels. Eight-pound cavalry sabers will be used.

Dr. Sargas' challenges were made against newspapermen, civil servants and a bank manager, who, he charged, insinuated he had married his beautiful wife for money.

House Group May Wield Ax On 13 Alphabetical Agencies

By Robert C. Albright.

Wielding a new control over the purse strings of emergency spending agencies, a House Appropriations sub-committee will meet at the Capitol early next month, armed with power to review for the first time the appropriations of 13 alphabetical bureaus.

Unless Congress by law extends their functions, nearly half of these agencies newly brought under Congressional appropriating powers, will pass into oblivion before July, 1937.

Under a little-known provision of the first deficiency appropriations act of 1936, Congress tightened its control over a host of independent New Deal set-ups, and provided that several established by executive order, without specific authorization by Congress, should die with the present fiscal year.

As interpreted by Congressional attaches closely studying the pro-

Campaign Lags, Chest Workers Plan New Push

With latest returns sending Washington's Community Chest drive well over the $1,000,000 mark, leaders "clamped down" at yesterday's luncheon meeting in the Willard Hotel and sent their corps of workers back into the field with a battle cry of "Get out and fight!"

Renewed campaign efforts and increased gifts are necessary if the drive is to succeed, Chairman Coleman Jennings warned. Explaining that current results are far behind last year's record over the same period, Jennings said pledges must total $227,000 a day for the next four days in order to reach the ultimate goal of $1,969,000 by next Tuesday.

Yesterday's returns totaled $129,405.17, from 20,072 donors. This brings the grand total to $1,061,612.62, or 53.91 per cent of the quota. Thus far, 79,005 persons and agencies have contributed to the Chest fund.

In a radio talk last night, Joseph P. Tumulty, chairman of the Special Assignments Unit, appealed to Washingtonians for support. He called upon donors to increase their gifts and help to send the drive "over the top."

"Hunger," another of the city's "four public enemies," had his chance to tell Chest doners what he thought of them at yesterday's meeting. Over a radio hook-up of the National Broadcasting Co., "Hun-

Roosevelt Ship Speeding South To Peace Rally

By the Associated Press.

Aboard the U. S. S. Chester at Sea, Nov. 18. — President Roosevelt, aboard the cruiser Indianapolis and escorted by the Chester, was 200 miles off the Florida coast tonight on a momentous journey to the Pan American Peace Conference at Buenos Aires.

Averaging 25 knots, the cruisers headed southeast through the Gulf stream. The party is due at Trinidad Saturday.

The President spent his first day out of Charleston in restful relaxation and said that speed would be maintained throughout the voyage.

Moultrie Guns Roar.

As his ship steamed out of the Charleston harbor this morning, Fort Moultrie's batteries roared out the 21-gun Presidential salute. He had been piped aboard with two salutes.

Mr. Roosevelt will address the Buenos Aires conference on December 1.

His welcome at Charleston was colorful. Met at the train by Gov. Olin D. Johnston and Army and Navy dignitaries, the President was received aboard by officers in full dress and cocked hats.

From his train to the dock he rode through 2 miles of streets lined with thousands of persons.

Delegates Nearing Rio.

Aboard the Steamship American Legion, en Route to Buenos Aires, Nov. 18 (AP).—The United States delegation to the Inter-American Peace Conference, nearing Rio de Janeiro, where a stop is scheduled tomorrow, completed tonight drafts of neutrality and cultural exchange conventions to be presented at the Buenos Aires parley.

The neutrality proposal includes a plan to set up a permanent inter-American consultative committee composed of the foreign ministers of each of the 21 republics to be represented.

Such a group, proponents assert, would be able to act at high speed to prevent troubles anywhere on the American continent without awaiting the processes of the present cumbersome diplomatic machinery.

Tugwell Quits; Presages Shift Of RA Agency

Agriculture Department Is Now Likely to Absorb New Deal Unit.

By Sidney Olson.

The resignation of "the man with no dirt on his shoes," Rexford G. Tugwell, Resettlement Administrator and Undersecretary of Agriculture, yesterday presaged the future shift of the RA into the Agriculture Department, it was indicated yesterday.

In New York, Charles William Taussig, president of the American Molasses Co., announced that Tugwell had accepted a position as an executive vice president of the company. Taussig and A. A. Berle, jr., a director of the company, are also former "brain trusters."

Tugwell's resignation of both his posts, and the President's acceptance, lay in a White House stenographer's desk drawer Tuesday night, unannounced because the stenographer forgot to transcribe her notes in her haste to get to the sickbed of her brother-in-law.

Puzzled reporters, concerned over the report in a New York newspaper that Tugwell was returning to Columbia University, jangled the telephone of Stephen T. Early, assistant White House secretary, yesterday morning shortly after midnight, only to find that he knew nothing of the report. The stenographer, worried about the possible consequences of an operation performed upon her brother-in-law, had forgotten to notify Early of the resignation.

Fear Whittling Down.

Resettlement officials yesterday unofficially expressed fears that RA would be whittled down considerably under the Agriculture Department's control. Tugwell, close to the President, was "so keen for the agency," said an official, "that he kept the program moving rapidly and efficiently, and always in the public eye."

Dr. W. W. Alexander, former Methodist Episcopal minister in Tennessee, and Tugwell's assistant in the RA, will become the new chief of the agency, Tugwell said in Memphis yesterday. This was not confirmed at the White House.

Tugwell, handsome, liberal, swiftly efficient—a scholar of consider-

Fearing 'Walkout,' Howard To Cancel Its Holiday Game

The traditional Thanksgiving Day football game here between Howard and Lincoln universities will be canceled, the Howard board of athletic control decided last night.

While no official announcement of the decision was made it was learned the action was taken because the board believes the Howard team might walk out on the game, as it did against Virginia Union Saturday.

The board already had yielded to all of the team's demands for food, but the situation remained deadlocked on the issue of fees which the board proposed to charge for the players' board. In agreeing to meet the demands, officials offered to give the football players "work scholarships" amounting to $20 a month and give each player $10 a month toward his board bill of $30 a month.

To raise additional money, the board proposed to increase the students' activities fee from $2.25 to $2.75 a semester. The students balked at this.

Two Brother Fire Fighters Die in Crash

Were in Group of 200 Battling Forest Blaze in Maryland.

Two youths, returning to their home at Indian Head, Md., after fighting a fire sweeping forest land between Clinton and Piscataway, were killed late last night when their car collided with a truck.

The dead youths were brothers, Herman Barnes, 22, and Albert Barnes, 18. They were in a party of seven young men who were driving back from the blaze with Alton Davis, a deputy sheriff, also of Indian Head.

The others in the car suffered injuries, the extent of which could not be learned immediately. Among them were Wallace Buck and George Buck. The accident occurred on the River Road about 7 miles from Indian Head in the direction of Washington.

The party was one group of the force of volunteers who all day long had fought the forest blaze. The fire area which at one time had a front nearly 15 miles long cast a red glow in the southeast sky visible from suburban sections of the Capital.

At least one farm home standing within 100 yards of the edge of the blaze was in immediate danger as Prince Georges County officials rounded up a fire-fighting force of more than 200 men and boys from adjoining farm homes and two Civilian Conservation Corps camps.

Hundreds of acres of timberland, much of it valuable, already has been destroyed and even larger areas are faced with destruction as hastily organized fire squads struggled feverishly to check the blaze.

Farmers and CCC workers were getting professional assistance by the fire companies of Indianhead and Marlboro.

Along other sectors of the far-flung fire front, CCC recruits and farmers, under the direction of Charles Adams and David P. Beatty, of the Brandywine camp, were digging ditches in the path of the flames, while in other sections firemen were beating flames with sand bags.

The farm home of C. R. Smith lay directly in the path of the ever-growing circle of flame. The area separating it from the fire, however, is well cleared and Smith and his family were standing by for orders to evacuate.

Love Flourishes Among the Barley Flowers Under the Cloak of Scientific Phraseology

By Eugene Warner.

At the risk of appearing a bit A. A. Milneish, we will attempt to tell the story of the love-life of a barley flower, with Merritt N. Pope, of the Bureau of Plant Industry, in the role of a Peeping Tom.

Pope "told all" to the American Society of Agronomy yesterday at the opening of that group's three-day meeting at the Mayflower. He did so in the extremely technical phraseology of the scientist, which will be translated freely, with his amused consent, at no extra charge.

For the benefit of the uninitiated a brief prologue might state that flowers are of two sexes, but are somewhat different from human beings in that they are both—at one and the same time.

Pope began spying on unsuspecting barley flowers last summer and saw some very interesting sights. It was, after all, just good, clean science.

He was particularly interested in the time factor in fertilization, for what reason only he knows, and discovered that male pollen can complete its romance in 35 minutes.

King Seeks Public's Support Of Romance, Labor M. P. Says

By the Associated Press.

London, Nov. 18.—A Laborite leader of the House of Commons declared in an interview today that King Edward was seeking support of the common people for his friendship with Mrs. Wallis Warfield Simpson—and even marriage if he wished.

James Maxton, of the extreme Socialistic labor group in the Commons, asserted the King was rallying support to combat opposition from the aristocracy to his association with Mrs. Simpson.

He made his assertions in the presence of William Gallacher, only Communist member of Parliament, and declared that the only reason he did not bring the subject directly before Parliament was the rule of procedure banning questions directly affecting the monarch.

"The King's dramatic appearance in Albert Hall on Armistice Night," Maxton said, "his review of the fleet and his present tour of Wales are all designed to overcome the vehement objections to a possible marriage from the ruling classes, especially their spokesman, the archbishop of Canterbury.

Battle Resumed, Mussolini, Hitler Recognize Rebels

Loyalist Cannons Pour Rain of Shells on Enemy Lines.

Toll in Air Raids Is Placed at 300

Counter Attack Started to Drive Invaders Out of Capital.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, Thursday, Nov. 19.—Government forces poured shells and bullets into the northwestern district of Madrid early today in an attempt to regain ground they had lost, as some official sources estimated 300 were killed in Tuesday's air and artillery attacks by besieging Fascists.

This estimate was considerably higher than that of the ministry of the interior, which announced only 11 persons were known dead, but added that 150 were believed buried under debris.

The ministry asserted 200 were injured, but other official sources placed the number at 800.

Firemen and volunteers worked feverishly to extricate those entombed, many of whom could be heard groaning.

Meanwhile, Fascist aviators, in an early morning raid, dropped at least twelve bombs in the center of the city.

One of the bombs landed near the telephone building — highest structure in Madrid—shattering many windows.

Men, women and children from nearby houses rushed into basements.

Firemen dashed through the streets in automobiles as smoke and flames rose from several buildings.

Cannons Shake City.

Furious cannonading in the University City section of northwestern Madrid shook the whole capital.

Gen. Jose Miaja, chief of the defense junta, was believed to have ordered an offensive to drive the Fascist insurgents back across the Manzanares River, which skirts the city.

Trench mortars and larger artillery pieces began to roar in the university area shortly after nightfall yesterday. Frequent bursts of rifle and machine gun fire were heard plainly.

Prior to the resumption of the bombardment, residents of the once gay city had emerged from subway hideaways where they sought refuge during Tuesday night's rebel attack.

The government meanwhile made no official comment on Italian and German recognition of the Fascist government, announced yesterday.

Fascist planes bombed the Ventas workers section of the city at dawn yesterday and the district near the Toledo Bridge. But for the rest of the day streets in the midtown area were safe from insurgent attack.

Machine guns and rifles pinged at opposing lines in the University City "no-man's land" throughout the day.

Most of the city's inhabitants, who spent the night of terror in subways as the ground above them shook with aerial bombs and artillery shells, went about their everyday business.

Gains Claimed.

Leaders of Madrid's defense units reinforced their barricades with seasoned veterans of the four-month-old civil war, and kept other lines of newer recruits farther back as a second defense.

Fascist leaders in the edge of Madrid asserted their tanks and infantry units were in Paseo de Rosales, in the western part of the city south of University City.

An official insurgent communique declared other units of Moors and legionnaires held the buildings of the schools of philosophy and science in University City.

Military observers within Madrid expressed belief the Fascists were concentrating on land and air bombardments, because Insurgent Generalissimo Franco was unwilling to risk great loss of men in infantry assaults.

At Saint Jean de Luz, France, Spanish militia, estimated at 40,000, were reported massed for an attack to recapture Fascist-held San Sebastian.

Press reports from Bilbao said the insurgent destroyer Velasco had been damaged by gunfire from two government trawlers which the warship's commander apparently thought were not armed Britain Stand Firm.

London, Nov. 18 (AP).—Great Britain has not the slightest intention of departing from her policy of non-intervention in Spain, informed sources said today after Germany and Italy had recognized the Spanish insurgents.

Franco Envoys See Rome Move to Aid Fascist Troops in Spain.

Madrid Regarded As Already Taken

Both Powers Still Hold to Neutrality Concord, Says Announcement.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, Nov. 18.—Fascist Italy and Nazi Germany today formally recognized the government of the Spanish Fascist insurgent Gen. Francisco Franco.

The communique which announced the joint approval of Franco's cause did not mention any changes in the nations neutrality policies in the civil war, but a guarded statement by the acting representative of the rebel government at Rome indicated that Franco hoped direct aid would be the next step.

German and Italian approval, said the Burgos envoy, Admiral Antonio Magaz, "will change the 'rights' of the situation in regard to neutrality as it concerns the position of the Burgos (rebel) government and those who have recognized it, and the other member nations of the non-intervention committee. But this latter point will have to be discussed by the committee."

Duce Addresses Council.

Premier Mussolini made a two-hour exposition of the international and domestic political situation before a session of the Fascist grand council tonight attended by almost all the highest Fascist officials, including Dino Grandi, who returned from London where he is the Italian Ambassador.

The Grand Council also heard Mussolini's son-in-law, Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano.

A communique said decisions of the council on international developments would be issued tomorrow.

"Il Duce discussed the political situation, both international and domestic, in an exposition which lasted two hours," the council said in a formal statement.

"Minister of foreign affairs Count Ciano then took the floor and spoke of his conversations in Berlin and Vienna, reading protocols signed there, and of his visit at Budapest."

Reich Remains Neutral.

The German recognition announcement was almost identical with the Italian communique, but official circles in Berlin intimated the Reich did not intend to bolt the neutrality pact as a sequel to recognition.

The Italian announcement of the joint action with Germany had been expected for some time because of the political similarity in many phases of the Franco cause and the regimes in Italy and Germany.

Reasons for the move were cited as Franco's "taking possession of the greater part of Spain," and the "lack of exercise of responsible governing power" in the remaining sections of the country held by the Popular Front government.

With the approval of Premier Mussolini, it was announced, Foreign Minister Galeazzo Ciano would send immediately a charge d'affaires to open diplomatic relations with Franco.

Capture Felt Sure.

Recognition indicated that Reichsfuehrer Hitler and Premier Mussolini felt Madrid already was as good as captured by Franco, because previously the two governments had indicated formal approval would be announced only after the fall of Madrid.

The Berlin announcement, made through the official government news agency, was virtually identical, except that the "Reich" was substituted for the Fascist government."

The joint action by Germany and Italy, it was announced, had been agreed upon during the recent Berlin visit of Foreign Minister Ciano during which other accords between the two nations were completed.

Fay Webb Dies; Vallee's Ex-Wife

Santa Monica, Calif., Nov. 18 (AP). Fay Webb Vallee, former dancer and radio crooner Rudy Vallee's one-time "dream girl," died tonight of peritonitis resulting from an operation last week from which she failed to rally.

Death came shortly before 9 o'clock while she lay in a coma in Santa Monica Hospital.

Lewis Defers Green Ouster By MinerUnion

Cease, Desist Order Issued Demanding He Abandon 'Disloyal' Course.

The executive board of the United Mine Workers of America, under the direction of President John L. Lewis, decided yesterday not to expel immediately their ranking member, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor.

The board, however, issued a "cease and desist" order, asking Green to halt his present actions and abandon his present associations with craft unionists. "If he decides to continue his opposition to its policies," said the board's statement, "he must henceforth assume the full responsibility of his disloyalty."

The latest shift in the battle between Lewis' Committee for Industrial Organization and the federation aroused disgust in the bosom of one member of the board of the Mine Workers, the key organization of the C. I. O.

Called "Game of Tag."

Asking that his name be withheld, he said:

"Everybody'll be kissing each other next. Green goes down to Tampa to oust the C. I. O. unions from the federation. Lewis decides to oust Green as a disloyal mine worker. Then Green stalls and the federation convention doesn't do any ousting. So Lewis stalls and the mine workers don't do any ousting. "It's just a game of tag!"

Other observers held that cooler heads were prevailing; that both Green and Lewis wish to avoid the odium of being named as the force which split labor's united ranks, and that each is matching the other's conciliatory moves until finally some way will be found to make possible a united front of some sort, even if it be in name only.

Board Explains Action.

The board issued a long statement yesterday, explaining its action. Previously they had summoned Green to stand trial before the board yesterday—on the very day when he was scheduled to be gavelling the federation convention toward a C. I. O. ouster in Tampa, Fla.

Green, replying by letter, denied "directly and categorically" that he was "disloyal" to the miners; refuted charges that he was engaged in "conspiracy" to injure their cause, and mentioned his 30 years of service, much of it as their President, in proof of his good will.

He was not represented yesterday. The board in a brief session dominated by the heavy-browed Lewis, did not examine his record, but "reviewed" his "recent acts on complaint of members."

Charges Cited.

The statement said in part:

"His acts against this union began in January this year. With his associates he branded the union as engaging in reprehensible enterprise. In February he served an ultimatum upon his own union and received its decision. In September with his allies he ejected his own union from his own federation. At the moment he is in convention with the adversaries of his own union * * * To deny these things is to stultify all sources of public information."

The board's action had been expected, as Lewis had outlined previously the union's course of action—to issue the cease and desist order, to observe Green's conduct, and then if he did not relent from his previous "obstructive" attitude toward C. I. O.'s campaign for industrial unionization in the country, to expel him as disloyal.

Observers declared yesterday that the labor split, still imminent, is delayed for a breathing spell.

Fire Engine, Auto Crash Hurts Man

Speeding to a fire a pumper of No. 8 Engine Company last night crashed into an automobile at Tenth and B streets northeast, injured one man and caused the arrest of another.

Jacob Feeling, 22, colored, of 1500 Massachusetts avenue southeast, passenger in an automobile driven by Richard M. Holland, 21, colored, of 1118 Montello avenue northeast, was treated at Casualty Hospital for lacerations of the face and possible fracture of small bones in his right hand. Holland was arrested by Ninth Precinct police for failing to give the right of way.

Witnesses said the battalion chief's car and one truck had passed before Holland drove into the path of the pumper which was trailing. Private Wiesmiller, 318 F Fifteenth street southeast was driving the pumper. Holland's machine was only slightly damaged by the impact.

The accident did not delay firemen from extinguishing a small fire at 316 Tenth street northeast.

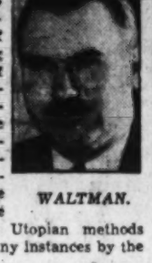
Some of Tugwell's Utopian Ideas Deserve Credit, But He Also Earned Abuse for Others.

By Franklyn Waltman

PASSING of Rexford Guy Tugwell from the New Deal stage affords President Roosevelt further opportunity to pursue a new approach in seeking to reach his objectives of ameliorating the condition of those least favored by fortune, for the youthful Columbia professor was responsible in large degree for the slap-dash and Utopian methods followed in many instances by the New Deal.



WALTMAN.

Although Prof. Tugwell has been a much abused man, much can and should be said in his favor. He was not responsible for all the things blamed on him. But some of the criticism heaped on him was deserved. With an unusually good theoretical understanding of the evils in our social system, Prof. Tugwell possesses a lively imagination productive of remedies. These he pursued with industry and the best of intentions and most of the time he was headed in the right direction.

But he suffers a lack of practicality and apparently has been governed by the same juvenile enthusiasm which in his sophomore year at the University of Pennsylvania inspired him to express in verse his dislike of "a nation's stenches" and of "propertied czars" and moved him to vow to "roll up my sleeves—and make America over."

The discovery of that bit of verse was one of the most revealing things about Rexford Guy Tugwell. Such sentiments were laudable in a sophomore—or anyone else—but he never quite shook off his sophomore year. "Sophomoric" is an apt term to apply to many of Prof. Tugwell's Utopian schemes and undertakings.

An example is close at hand. In a desire to improve the housing conditions of low-income groups, Prof. Tugwell conceived the idea of satellite villages, such as the Greenbelt at Berwyn, Md. There he produced a community of excellent proportions—but at a cost which cannot be amortized on the basis of the proposed rentals. Raise the rentals and the purpose of low-cost housing is destroyed.

It has been said that this project has been a successful experiment and example of what can be done in the housing field. But all it seems to prove is that you can build good houses if you have the money. It does not require a college degree to know that the Treasury cannot subsidize good housing for everyone in the low-income class. Thus, except for a few people, nothing has been done to solve the problem of improving housing facilities.

Such undertakings by Prof. Tugwell—and others could be cited—gave the New Deal a reputation for recklessness. But he brought the New Deal into disrepute in other ways. His writings and speeches, while proper enough for an academician seeking to arouse discussion, were improper in a public official and administrator whose opinions or suggestions were interpreted as statements of policy.

Prof. Tugwell thus made himself available as a target for all those who disliked the New Deal. His radicalism was cited as the radicalism of the New Deal. Resentment among certain groups flamed against Prof. Tugwell and he became their bete noir of the New Deal—and in accepting him as the symbol of the New Deal they could not or failed to see what President Roosevelt was trying to do.

Psychologically he damaged the New Deal by holding it back and now that he is leaving the Roosevelt Administration the psychological effect should be good. Those who feared excesses on the part of the New Deal can console themselves, at least, that Prof. Tugwell is there no more. As for progress toward the President's objectives—no ground will be lost, for he is the compelling force there.

It is ironical, however, that the man feared in Wall Street as an agent of Moscow and an inspirer of Red plots should now take up his office at 120 Wall street as an executive vice president of the American Molasses Co. and that he will be the neighbor—in the same building—of such a classical economist as Walter W. Stewart, chairman of the board of Case, Pomeroy & Co.

It is ironical that the American Molasses Co. at 120 Wall street should be the end of the sophomore who wrote:

"We begin to see richness as poorness; we begin to dignify toil.
I have dreamed my great dreams of their passing,
I have gathered my tools and my charts;
My plans are fashioned and practical;
I shall roll up my sleeves—make America over!"

Well, if Prof. Tugwell inculcates "production for use instead of profit" into the manufacture of molasses, we may look forward to cheaper liquor—and that would be progress!

Exhumation Plan Delayed on Coast

Los Angeles, Nov. 18 (AP).—A plan to seek exhumation of Reid Russell's body for investigation of a theory he may have been the victim of a "love slaying" rather than self-destruction was delayed today by District Attorney Buron Fitts.

Capt. Clyde Plummer, Fitts' chief investigator, had planned to ask a court order today for disinterring the body of Russell, 28, who was found shot to death September 25 in a lawn swing at the Manhattan Beach estate of Gouverneur Morris, writer. Russell was a friend of Mr. and Mrs. Morris.

Fitts, entering the case today for the first time, instructed Plummer to postpone his exhumation request until they could go over the evidence together tomorrow.

Mitchell of Illinois Given Farewell Party

Friends and former business associates of Representative Arthur W. Mitchell (Democrat), of Illinois, held an informal smoker Wednesday at the Whitelaw in his honor, in the nature of a farewell reception before he leaves with Mrs. Mitchell for Honolulu by way of the Panama Canal. The reception was arranged by Thomas Fraizer, with Emory B. Smith as master of ceremonies.

Among the speakers were Dean Kelly Miller, Dean E. P. Davis and Alain Leroy Locke, of Howard University; Dr. Garnet C. Wilkinson, assistant superintendent of public schools; Dr. T. Edward Jones, surgeon in chief of Freedmen's Hospital; Francis Wells, Dr. F. O. Williston, William Woodson, L. O. Robinson, Charles Johnson and Charles Weston.

Labor Praises Roosevelt Plan OfCo-operation

White House Program Is Outlined by Berry, Miss Perkins.

Tampa, Fla., Nov. 18.—The new Roosevelt industrial program, roughly outlined by two White House emissaries, drew applause today from the American Federation of Labor's convention.

Co-operation between labor and industry was the keynote in messages delivered by Secretary Perkins and George L. Berry, President Roosevelt's co-ordinator for industrial co-operation.

Miss Perkins also said the Walsh-Healy Government contract act, regarded by labor as an NRA substitute, must be broadened in its scope, and that "a strong union movement" was an essential supplement to a legislative program.

Berry predicted Presidential election results would lead the Supreme Court to an about-face in judging New Deal legislation, and said his Labor-Industry Council would have a legislative program ready for Congress soon.

The election results, he added, also brought many previously antagonistic business men into the council.

The convention's biggest issue—the feud between John L. Lewis' rebel unions and the federation's old guard over organization policy—simmered throughout the day.

The deadline for resolution introduction passed with 258 before the convention.

Aid for the Spanish government against Fascists was called for by A. Feinberg, of Los Angeles.

Berry, in a resolution, called for a thorough executive council study of the Nation's tax system, with recommendations for revision.

Supreme Court Condemned.

Others would have the convention condemn use of the National Guard in strikes, the Standard Oil Co. of California for its part in the 1935 Pacific Coast tanker strike and the Supreme Court for declaring unconstitutional "social justice" legislation.

A plan for bettering working conditions was proposed by James Wilson, former A. F. of L. vice president and now with the International Labor Office in Geneva.

International labor conference treaties to shorten hours in a number of industries soon would be placed before the Senate for ratification, he said.

Feinberg's resolution said, in part: "Fascist nations in violation of nonintervention pacts have openly supported the rebels.

"The Fascist Spanish rebels are attempting to destroy the trade union movement.

"A victory for fascism in Spain would strengthen the Fascist nations of Europe which already have crushed the trade union movement.

Urges Living Wage.

"Be it resolved, that the American Federation of Labor at its fifty-sixth convention go on record to aid the democratically elected government of Spain and that the American Federation of Labor agree to co-operate with those groups and organizations that are rallying public opinion and financial rial help for the Spanish loyalists."

ists."

Max Zaritsky, president of the United Hatters, Cap and Millinery Workers, and the only member of Lewis' rebel committee to come to the convention, arrived with "nothing to say."

"I have no rabbit to pull out of my hat," Zaritsky added, when asked whether he had any new peace plans.

Miss Perkins disclosed she was planning a conference with union leaders to "discuss plans for legislation in which they are particularly interested." She spoke of a national living wage, continuity of income, stability of employment and "guidance for the conservation and maximum utilization of natural resources" as a formula for progress.

She also urged ratification of the child labor amendment and co-operative action by States in raising labor standards.

Abbot Refutes Sun 'Explosion' Effect on Earth

Solar Eruptions to Reach Next Maximum in 1940, Scientist Declares.

Although 16 large spots were observed on the sun in a single day last week, the next maximum of activity will occur probably not before 1939 or 1940, Dr. Charles G. Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, said yesterday.

An international authority on solar phenomena, Dr. Abbot believes the next big eruption on the sun's surface will make the 1928 "explosions" seem mild by comparison.

Ever since they were discovered, more than 300 years ago, sunspots have been associated with terrestrial phenomena. Even today the maxima are believed by many to herald disaster. Floods, drought, crop failures, famines, panics, wars and pestilences have been blamed on the solar tempests.

"Some of the relationships claimed," said Dr. Abbot, "have been supported by considerable evidence, but most of them cannot be considered as proved."

His dissent is based largely on the fact that the sunspots themselves are not causative, probably being symptoms of deeper forces which may produce profound effects on the earth's surface.

While it may be shown that major wars have occurred during or near each of the 30 years of sunspot maxima, it must be remembered that few years have passed without a serious conflict somewhere on earth, Dr. Abbot asserted. The same goes for panics, famines and other social calamities.

Discovery of sunspot is generally attributed to Galileo, though the phenomenon was noted about the same time by other astronomers. Since then, maxima have been observed in 1615, 1626, 1639, 1649, 1660, 1675, 1685, 1693, 1705, 1716, 1727, 1738, 1750, 1761, 1769, 1778, 1788, 1805, 1816, 1829, 1837, 1848, 1860, 1870, 1883, 1894, 1906, 1917 and 1928.

5,000 Watch Mgr. Corrigan Made Rector

Princes of Church, National Notables at Ceremony Blessed by Pope.

of their number as there were at the inaugural ceremonies yesterday. On the stage in addition to Cardinal Hayes and Cardinal Dougherty were 75 bishops, archbishops, auxiliary bishops and monsignors.

Pleads for Social Justice.

But Mgr. Corrigan in his inaugural address pleaded with his listeners to forget the pomp and circumstance of the ceremony to realize the importance of spreading Catholic principles of social justice in a world dividing into factions under the banners "With God" and "Against God."

Deploring the departure from theology in the search for truth in other universities, Mgr. Corrigan said that at Catholic University "we seek the light from the truth of God; and theology must send down its glow of faith and its confidence of hope into every branch, major and auxiliary, that is to be taught in these halls founded on principles as true in the twentieth century as when the medieval universities rose gloriously upon them in the twelfth.

"With this thought in mind, we can see our university leadership here instituting over a period of time, a great school of social science."

Skips Two Paragraphs.

At this juncture, Mgr. Corrigan skipped two full paragraphs in his prepared address outlining his ambitions for such a school in which he said:

"The broad purpose of such a school would be to imbue American economic and political thinking with Catholic social philosophy."

Neither economics nor political science as they are being taught in American universities, Mgr. Corrigan's text asserted, accept moral postulates or purposes. "Divorcement of the social science from moral obligations," the text continued, "is carried into business and industrial life and enjoys the prestige of university origin."

Revealing the broad scope intended for the new school, Mgr. Corrigan in his prepared address said:

"Those to be admitted to training in the courses proposed in such a school would be clerics, laymen, religious and lay women, preparing themselves for the following activities: Professors in colleges and high schools, economic consultants and research persons in labor unions; supervisors and technical experts in social insurance offices, executive directors of public forums, editors of labor and farm magazines and newspapers, experts in international relations."

Social Philosophy.

The list is far from complete, but each of these activities that the incumbent has a social philosophy. Most incumbents of this country have a social philosophy which is not Catholic."

"The Catholic University, of course, is concerned primarily with knowledge and scientific truth. As a Catholic University it cannot overlook the fact that for various reasons, imagination, for example, a disproportionate number of the working population and of the poor in the United States are Catholic. They have a right therefore to have the Catholic doctrines of social justice applied to American society, and it would seem that the Catholic University has a corresponding obligation to make Catholic doctrine a part of American life, to the benefit of Catholics indeed, but also to the entire people."

Eyes Turned to Butler.

Many eyes in the audience turned toward Justice Butler, who soon must pass on the constitutionality of the social security act when Mgr. Corrigan said:

Federal and State legislation intimately affecting our entire social and personal life, and every phase of that life today, has already opened a series of changes looking to social security for every class of citizen which is not likely to be put aside whatever changes partisan politics."

As Mgr. Corrigan told of the part five previous rectors of Catholic University played in the institution's growth, the audience broke into applause when he mentioned the name of his immediate predecessor, the Most Rev. James Hugh Ryan, Bishop of Omaha. The applause continued until Bishop Ryan stood in his red robe and doffed his bishop's hat.

Invocation was delivered by His Eminence Patrick Cardinal Hayes who prayed that Mgr. Corrigan be given strength to perform his arduous and important task.

Appealing for the support of all Catholics, lay and religious alike, Cardinal Dougherty said, "it would be a disgrace and a scandal if the university were to fail in its purpose."

Mgr. Corrigan will need funds to wipe out the university's debt, keep its chairs filled with able professors and its halls filled with students, Cardinal Dougherty reminded.

"Let us not content ourselves with good wishes and congratulations for the high honor conferred upon Mgr. Corrigan," Cardinal Dougherty said, "we must also give him our support for the good of the university and the welfare of the Catholic Church throughout the United States."

Recalls Debt of Clergy.

The Most Rev. John J. Mitty, delivering greetings to Mgr. Corrigan on behalf of the clerical alumni, recalled the debt the Catholic clergy owe the university.

"How faltering and stumbling our steps would have been in the past 50 years had not the university been here," he said.

"What is happening here today," said Bishop Mitty, "will somehow or other affect every parish and mission in the United States."

Francis P. Garvan, of New York, in behalf of the lay alumni, pledged Mgr. Corrigan the support of the university's graduates.

The Rev. Joseph P. Christopher, Ph. D., public orator for the university, read the citation of the degrees conferred upon Justice Butler and Mgr. Lavelle. Of Justice Butler, third public official to receive an honorary degree from the institution, Father Christopher said:

"There appears before you today one who has long been regarded as a light and ornament of the American bar, who at all times has championed consistently and courageously the cause of justice and who in the whole tenor of his life has been faithful to the injunction of Horace, 'Let him remain to the end such as he was when he first appeared'—throughout consistent."

Of Mgr. Lavelle, Father Christopher said:

"He is unique as an octogenarian, for although advanced in years, he seems to know nothing about old age save what he has read in Cicero. We greet him as the good parish priest who possesses gravity tempered with humor, who with true Christian charity loves to be pleasant, but never causes pain. We salute him as a 'lover of brotherhood' at whose hospitable table innumerable matters of importance referring to the archdioceses, the university or civic welfare have been discussed and settled throughout all these long years."

The Right Rev. Patrick J. McCormick, vice rector of the university, presided at the ceremonies.

The ceremonies opened with procession, moving in three units across the campus. First came the hierarchy, their crimson robes whipping in the wind and the sunlight glittering on their large golden crucifixes. They were followed by the university faculty and trustees.

Alphabet Units Face Scrutiny Of House Group

Committee May Wield Ax on 13 Agencies; Some to Die by July.

vise, it means about eight agencies that have been budgeting their own expenses out of receipts and funds in hand, will have to submit to annual appropriations by Congress, and the remaining five will cease to exist unless Congress extends their powers.

Curtailment Expected.

New Deal units that would expire under the clause, because they were established by executive order and not by law, include the Electric Home and Farm authority, the Federal Surplus Commodities Corporation, the Commodity Credit Corporation and the Export-Import Bank of Washington, formerly divided into two parts.

Entirely apart from the deficiency act provision, the Works Progress Administration, the Public Works Administration and the Resettlement Administration now are legally authorized to continue only through the present fiscal year, although legislation carrying many of their functions into the permanent Federal establishment is expected.

For the first time since their creation, the following emergency agencies must account to the House Appropriations Committee, and obtain definite allotment of funds for another year's operations, should they continue:

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation.
The Federal Home Loan Bank board.
The Home Owners Loan Corporation.
The Federal Housing Administration.
The Federal Savings & Loan Corporation.
The Federal Farm Mortgage Corporation.
The Public Works Administration.
R. F. C. Mortgage Corporation.

Hearings Scheduled.

Chairman James P. Buchanan of the House Appropriations Committee, largely responsible for tightening Congressional control over the spending of these agencies, has not yet returned to Washington, but the independent offices sub-committee, headed by Representative Clifton A. Woodrum, of Virginia, will open hearings in his absence early next month. Fiscal officers of the new agencies covered under Congressional appropriation machinery, probably will appear before this group.

The deficiency act provision, written into the law through collaboration of Buchanan and Chairman Carter Glass, of the Senate Appropriations Committee, reads as follows:

"Notwithstanding any other provision of law, none of the establishments or agencies named in subsection (b) of this section shall after June 30, 1937, incur any obligation for administrative expenses, except pursuant to an annual appropriation specifically therefor, nor shall any such establishment or agency continue to function after said date unless established by or pursuant to law."

Loans Cease January 31.

In addition, general curtailment of recovery agency activities during the present fiscal year already is provided in acts affecting these agencies. The RFC must cease its lending operations next January 31, but is given until 1492 to liquidate. HOLC lending powers have expired, but the corporation has 15 more years for collection and other activities.

Some agencies are due to cease functioning before the end of the fiscal year unless Congress takes action extending them. The Electric Home and Farm Authority, for example, has only until April 1 to run.

The House Appropriations Committee is somewhat handicapped in exercising its broadened authority over both emergency and regular departments by heavy losses in the November elections. Twelve of its 39 members have been removed by defeats, retirements and deaths—8 Democrats and 4 Republicans, many of them in key committee posts. But general committee reorganization must await convening of Congress, January 5.

The Senate Appropriations Committee, which really gets under way only after the House has acted on appropriation measures, lost four members—three Republicans and one Democrat.

Tugwell Move Presages Shift Of RA Agency

Agriculture Department Is Now Likely to Absorb New Deal Unit.

able attainments and a writer of recognized distinction, was known variously as "the Barrymore of the Brain Trust," "Rex, the Red," and "Mr. America," because of his masculine good looks.

Tugwell's jump from the obscurity of a scholar's job as a professor at Columbia University to unpopularity as one of the Administration's whipping boys, now has a rival epic chapter in his move from the New Deal to Wall street.

Tugwell did not make a single speech in the recent campaign. Yet his name was denounced more heartily and more often than that of any other Administration leader. To many newspaper readers he was presented as a messenger from Moscow, as a plotter preparing to overthrow the American form of Government, as a believer in alien theories which would wreck the American system.

Kept Out of Campaign.

Through all the turmoil that has surrounded his crisp, gray-curled head, the 45-year-old professor from Chautauqua County, N. Y., remained quiet, detached and politely aloof from the dirt and lather of politics and its daily dealings. Interested only in the advancement of a few principles, which include the belief that economics is not a science but only a constant experiment which should be worked with the public's benefit in mind, Tugwell quietly pushed ahead in the face of a barrage of criticism and attack seldom equaled in political annals.

He is a sensitive man, and the attacks have hurt him, those close to the "Last of the Bra. Trusters of 1933" say. In 1934, when President Roosevelt asked the Senate to confirm his promotion of Tugwell to the post of Undersecretary of Agriculture, Senator Ellison D. (Cotton Ed) Smith, South Carolina Democrat, bellowed in the Senate:

"He is not a graduate of God's Great University!"

Tugwell smiled at that, but much of the criticism directed at his activities has baffled and hurt him, according to his intimates. Not wanting to quit under fire, he stayed in the Democrats' storm cellar until the campaign was over, and then decided to accept the well-cushioned New York post with the American Molasses Co.

Dabbled in Pottery.

At this Senate hearing, Tugwell, preserving an air of well-bred amusement at the Senators' questions, testified that he had been a "dirt farmer," that he had plowed land, raised a prize-winning Holstein calf, cleaned out his father's slaughterhouse, and worked in fruit orchards in his youth.

He defended his principles at that time, insisting that: "I would really like to conserve all those things that I grew up to respect and love, and not to see them destroyed."

Born of a well-to-do family in Sinclairville, N. Y., on July 10, 1891, Tugwell had no money problems as a child, and although he did the tasks he named on the farm, he wasn't forced to do them by economic necessity. His father owned a prosperous cannery, and Rex was more of a city lad than many of his rural friends. In high school and in college he wrote poetry, a habit which later gave him great trouble, as some of the opponents of the pure food and drug act, which he sponsored in Congress, dug up one of his early efforts in their attempt to show that he was a Communist at heart. The poem began:

"I am strong,
"I am big and well made,
"I am muscled, lean and nervous,
"I am sick of a Nation's stenches,
"I am sick of propertied czars. * * *
"I shall roll up my sleeves—make America over!"

Resigned as Protest.

After college in Pennsylvania University, he taught there for two years, resigning with a number of the Pennsylvania faculty after Scott Nearing had been ousted from the staff for alleged seditious activities. Tugwell's resignation was a protest against the methods of the trustees.

After teaching economics at the University of Washington for a year, he went to Paris as manager of the American University Union during the last year of the war, and returned home, ill and disgusted with waste and slaughter.

After a siege of ill health, during which he built a house with his own hands for his family on his New York State farm at Wilson, he went to Columbia University as an instructor, received a Ph. D. degree from Pennsylvania, and climbed the academic ladder to a full professorship in 1931.

The next year he was introduced to President Roosevelt by Raymond Moley, one of the original "brain-trusters."

The President brought him to Washington as an adviser; he became Assistant Secretary of Agriculture in 1933 and Undersecretary in 1934. Last year he was made chief of the newly created Resettlement Administration.

His probable successor, Dr. Alexander, is a native of Morrisville, Mo., was graduated from Scarritt-Morrisville College and Vanderbilt University, and began a ministerial career in Murfreesboro and Nashville in 1901. He was associate executive secretary of the Southeastern military department of the Army Y. M. C. A. in the World War, and later assumed leadership of the Commission on Inter-racial Co-operation. He became interested in the farm tenancy problem as the result of a study made in 1933, and has been active in R. A. measures since its formation.

Washington speculation on the future of RA has repeatedly held that the agency would be shifted to the Department of Agriculture under the direction of Secretary Henry A. Wallace. Wallace and Tugwell have often been reported to be cool in personal relations, but this factor in the resignation is not calculable, according to observers.

Text of Letters.

The RA chief's letter of resignation to the President said:

"My Dear Mr. President:

"For reasons which have been discussed between us more than once, I should like to be permitted to resign from the Government and return to private life within the next few months.

"I have served through the better part of your first term as President with growing confidence in your policies and in you. I do not need to say that if you ever have real need for me again I shall be on call.

"Respectfully yours,
"R. G. TUGWELL."

Just before the President left the White House, last night, to entrain for Charleston, S. C., he dictated the following letter in reply to Tugwell:

"Dear Rex:

"I fully understand the reasons that make you feel you should, for a while at least, return to private life within the next few months. You have given generously and efficiently of your services to the Government for these past four years, and I want you to know that later on I fully expect to ask you to come back to render additional service.

"Later on when I have returned from my trip to South America, we can talk over the actual date on which you will want your resignation to be effective.

"With my warm regards,
"As ever yours,
"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

with the aristocracy, the King is on a campaign to consolidate his personal popularity with the masses.

Earlier it was disclosed that a London publishing firm refused to print an editorial on King Edward's friendship with Mrs. Simpson set in type for the weekly publication of the Independent Labor Party.

Censorship Topic.

The editorial, prepared for the New Leader, was captioned "How Long Will Censorship Be Maintained?" The editorial, Fenner Brockway, editor, said, discussed openly the friendship.

The editor said that publication was refused on the ground the editorial might contain "seditious libel" and that the printing company considered it a breach of "good faith."

A portion of the editorial dealt with a solemn discussion as to whether Mrs. Simpson was a Fascist.

King Calls Parley.

Mountain Ash, Wales, Nov. 18 (AP). King Edward summoned his aides to conference here tonight to consider relief measures for impoverished Welsh mining districts which he saw at first hand during an all-day inspection tour.

Sir George Gillett, special commissioner for the "black" areas of depression, and Malcolm Stewart, former commissioner who resigned recently after reporting on Welsh conditions, joined the monarch aboard his special train.

Pipe clutched in his mouth and derby hat in hand, Edward had spent seven hours motoring and walking through dreary areas hard hit by depression, seeing for himself smokeless stacks and rusting furnaces, chatting with men who had not worked for years.

At Merthyr Tydfil, in the center of the great South Wales coal basin, where 75 per cent of the population is workless, the streets were lined with thousands of cheering men and women.

Guards Seize Veteran.

For a brief moment, alarm seized Edward's guards during the morning inspection when a middle-aged former soldier grasped Edward by the arm. Guards grabbed the man and hustled him away, remembering the revolver-throwing incident in London last July when George Andrew McMahon, 34, slithered a loaded weapon at the feet of Edward's horse during a military parade on Constitution Hill.

The old soldier explained:

"I only wanted to remind his majesty that when he first landed in France during the war, I was a member of his first guard of honor. I'm sure he would understand."

He was released.

Woman Killed When Car Hits Telephone Pole

Twenty-one-year-old Mildred Myers, of 1321 Belmont street northwest, was killed early this morning when the machine in which she was riding struck a telephone pole on the Rockville-Potomac pike.

The young woman was brought to Georgetown Hospital where she was pronounced dead on arrival. David Kaminsky, 22, of 704 Otis place northwest, who was also in the car, suffered lacerations and bruises.

A 16-year-old messenger boy and a 68-year-old man were among those injured seriously in traffic accidents here last night. The messenger, Robert Snyder, 610 E street northeast, suffered a fractured skull when he was knocked from his bicycle in front of his home by an automobile driven by William Lane, 33, of 1240 N street northwest. He is in Casualty Hospital.

William Newhauser, 68, of 235 Eighth street northeast, suffered a brain concussion and a dislocated right shoulder when he was struck at Eleventh street and Maryland avenue northeast by an automobile driven, police said, by Guy Thompson, 814 Eleventh street northeast. He was treated at Casualty Hospital.

Seven-year-old Rudolph Berkley, 1807 Capital avenue northeast, suffered a fractured right arm when he was struck in the 1100 block of Queens street northeast by an automobile driven, according to police, by Joseph Winchester, 40, of 800 block of K street northeast. He was treated at Children's Hospital.

$8,000 Fire Destroys Club at Annapolis

Annapolis, Nov. 18 (AP).—The Annapolitan Club, two-story frame and brick building, located in the heart of the city, was destroyed today by a fire which started around a fireplace on the top floor.

Fire Marshal Jesse A. Fisher estimated the loss at approximately $8,000. Some furniture was saved by the salvage corps.

Jail Head to Speak.

Thomas M. Rives, superintendent of the District Jail, will discuss juvenile delinquency problems at a meeting at 11 a. m. today of the Women's Guild of Sibley Hospital. The Rev. E. G. Sex Glands Are 'Transplanted' From Executed Man to Patient

Johns Hopkins Surgeon Discloses Operation Performed in 1934; Sufferer From Lack of Hormones Was 'Revitalized' for 2 Years.

By the United Press.

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 18.—Successful transpalnting of sex glands from an executed criminal to a 48-year-old man suffering from lack of powerful hormones was disclosed today by Dr. Hugh H. Young, Johns Hopkins University surgeon.

The operation revitalized the patient for two years and then he lapsed into his former state.

Details of the operation were revealed at the convention of the Southern Medical Association which opened today.

According to Dr. Young's data, the patient who suffered from an abnormality caused by failure of his glands to produce the hormones found in the normal individual, asked Johns Hopkins physicians if they could help him.

One of the doctors was associated with the Maryland Penitentiary and suggested that relief might be obtained by transplanting the glands from a young criminal who was soon to be hanged. The youth was in good health and there was every reason to believe the operation might be successful. The patient agreed.

Doctors at the penitentiary operated on the convict as soon as he was officially pronounced dead, removing the sex glands. They were hurried to the hospital, where the physicians had prepared the patient for the transplanting. Only a few minutes had elapsed.

Almost immediately, Dr. Young said, the man began to show improvement. This improvement continued for two years. The man became a normal, active, interested individual. Then he began to lapse into his former state and the Johns Hopkins doctors told him that no permanent cure could be obtained from future operations.

Dr. Young explained that apparently the transplanted glands gradually ceased to function.

Scientist Pries Into Love-Life Of the Barley

'Peeping Tom' Reveals All, But His Report Needs Translation.

This was a discovery unknown to agronomists. They had just never gotten around to putting a stop-watch on the business.

Pope was asked how such things were timed, as few if any lovers, even in the floral world, like to be watched. He then admitted to a dastardly deed.

He said he stopped the barley flowers, many of them, while in the midst of their germination process, by cutting them in half with a knife. The separate halves of the flowers were photographed and then the photos were enlarged 600 times.

In the enlargements, taken at 5-minute intervals, a distinct assimilation of the male pollen by the female pistil may be seen. Germination starts in 5 minutes and is complete in 35, at normal summer temperatures.

"The primary endosperm nucleus produced daughter endosperm cells within 6 hours," the quaint wordage of his report goes on, "and the zygote had divided to form a two-cell embryo within 14 hours after pollination."

In the words of a less gifted narrator, that means that the barley flower is "blessed eventing" after 14 hours, and a new little life is well under way which will become a seed and some day, maybe, a barley itself, only to be drunk as barley water by some old gout-ridden man.

That is about all there is to the love life of a barley flower, except some of the flowers underwent even crueler treatment with the knife. The same doings that make headlines in human life were being done all summer in the Arlington greenhouses and nobody reported them.

Some of the male barley flowers were emasculated. The barley flowers thus treated were germinated by Pope by means of extraction of male pollen from unemasculated flowers. The issue, thereof are, therefore, what might be referred to as test-tube babies, another matter which attained no little attention recently in New York, but which isn't worth a paragraph in a botanist's journal.

Suspect Is Held In Ohio Slaying

Warren, Ohio, Nov. 18 (AP).—Indiana detectives and Warren police arrested late today Joseph Poholsky, sought since June in the "head and hands" slaying of Capt. Harry R. Miller, retired Cincinnati fire fighter.

Capt. Matt Leach, of the Indiana State police, identified Poholsky as one of four persons under indictment in the case.

Capt. Miller was slain June 11. His torso was found near Eminence, Ky., on June 19 and on June 28 a lake near Carrollton, Ky., yielded his head and hands.

Heber L. Hicks, former chauffeur for Miss Flora Miller, sister of the dead man, has signed a confession wherein Leach said he admitted plotting the slaying in the hope of gaining Miller's fortune, estimated at $65,000.

Contrast Theme Of U. S. Patent Centenary Fete

Early Inventions and Latest Marvels of Science to Vie for Interest.

Additional details of next Monday's celebration of the American patent system's one hundredth birthday anniversary were announced yesterday by Thomas Midgley, jr., chairman of the executive committee on the centennial.

From the opening address by Dr. Harrison E. Howe at 10 a. m. until the concluding radio program, the observance will be filled with contrasts of the old and the new scientific progress.

The final program, made public yesterday by Midgley, contains the following highlights:

Addresses by Thomas Ewing, former Commissioner of Patents; Dean Dexter S. Kimball, of the Cornell College of Engineering; Robert E. Wilson, vice chairman of the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport Co., and Dr. Howe, editor of Industrial and Engineering Chemistry, all at the morning session in the National Academy of Sciences auditorium.

Research Parade.

A "research parade," scheduled for 2 p. m. in the same auditorium, which will depict the latest inventions which have not yet been applied industrially or commercially. They include polarizing materials that prevent blinding headlight glare, application of the television electron tube to the microscope, production of glass textiles and the testing of silk stockings.

A dress rehearsal of this series of demonstrations will be held in the Academy auditorium Sunday night for newspapermen and Patent Office officials.

At 4 p. m. the celebration will be transferred to the Department of Commerce auditorium, where a bust of Thomas Jefferson will be dedicated. Jefferson's influence was responsible in a large degree for the founding of the present patent system.

Climax of the one-day celebration will be the banquet at the Hotel Mayflower, when patented foods will constitute the entire menu, guests receiving licenses from the companies holding patents on the products served.

Pageant of Contrasts.

Dinner entertainment will be a pageant of contrasts. Music will be by a 1840 melodeon and the newest type of electrical organs. Early in the program the ballroom illumination will be provided by candles, befitting the era of 1836, then Toastmaster Charles F. Kettering, by waving his hand through the beam of a photoelectric cell, will introduce lighting effects of such magnitude as have never been used within four walls.

After the dishes have been cleared away, Dr. Kettering, who is chairman of the national centennial committee, will introduce Patents Commissioner Conway P. Coe, who will read the honor roll of the ten greatest deceased American inventors.

One of the most unusual features of the entire celebration will be an address by the late Thomas Alva Edison, made possible by one of his own inventions—the phonograph. His topic will be "Let Us Not Forget."

Using one of the two original Morse telegraph receivers, Dr. Kettering will receive in the banquet hall the inventor's first message, "What hath God wrought," which will be transmitted over the original Baltimore-to-Washington route. R. B. White, president of Western Union, will tap out the famous words.

Then, from a transport airliner high about Washington, will come a short-wave broadcast honoring the ten great inventors for the honor roll.

Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper will discuss the place of the patent system in the Nation's industrial progress.

Final act of the centennial program will present Dr. Kettering peering into a synthetic crystal-gazing ball to predict what scientific marvels are to come in the next 100 years.

The dinner program, to be followed by a dance under auspices of the Patent Office Society, will be broadcast over a Nation-wide network.

Danger of War Seen In Reich-Japan Pact

Paris, Nov. 18 (AP).—Official quarters today characterized the reported German-Japanese accord as a "dangerous move which might lead to world war."

Foreign Minister Yvon Delbos conferred with Vladimir Potemkin, Russian Ambassador to France, concerning the reported anticommunism front which official circles said Italy was expected to join.

Creation of Beauty Is Hobby Of Homecraft Club Members

Orrin Davy at his hobby.

As little boys they carved figures out of soap and proudly exhibited home-made medicine cabinets. Now, grown into lawyers, photographers, bookbinders and government clerks, they are producing fine furniture, candlesticks, hand-carved ornaments and other useful objects—strictly as a hobby.

They are the 40 or more members of the Capital Homecraft Club, headed by Lewis E. Johnson, an employe of the Weather Bureau.

While some men prefer golf, stamp collecting, gardening, or pocket billiards, as a pastime, this small group of Washingtonians and suburbanites finds recreation in the operation of lathes and jigsaws.

"And it's more than just recreation," said George A. Simonds, 3009 Twentieth street northeast. "Why, fooling around in my basement 'plant' pulled me through the depression."

Owner of an H street bookbindery, Simonds tried golf, rabbit and guinea pig raising and several other hobbies before "finding himself" as a wood carver. That was a couple of years ago.

Since then he has created a large number of artistic plaques, painstakingly fashioned from imported woods, been elected vice president of the American Society of Inlay Artists and exhibited numerous items in the annual shows of the Capital Homecraft Club.

A more recent initiate to the inner circle of advanced whittlers but one who has been building miscellaneous knick-knacks for years is Orrin Davy, an electrician, whose home at 420 Eleventh street southeast is a veritable curiosity shop.

Davy's tinkerings have resulted in construction of a grandfather clock, a tiny but perfect spinning wheel, a model of "Old Ironsides" and dozens of other specimens. He has had to remodel a rear room several times to provide accommodations for his products. Even so they overflow into all parts of the house.

One of his fellow club members has invested more than $2,000 in his basement shop. Most of them do their work in basements but some have appropriated kitchens, porches, garages and even bedrooms for their purposes.

Wives in this clique are known as "basement widows," though most of them realize philosophically that if their husbands were not creating something new in bridge lamps or book ends they might be out playing poker. This way, at least, they are at home.

Joseph Chlopicki, who projects the pictures you see on the screen at RKO-Keith's, turns out lamps, candle sticks, dainty miniatures and all sorts of wooden objects in his Berwyn Heights, Md., home.

Another expert wood turner is B. A. Millard, of Laurel, who has been a machinist at the Navy Yard for 36 years. He is a lamp specialist. His nephew, A. L. Gosnell, also is a member of the club.

Fine furniture is the specialty of H. J. Robb, a photographer, of 3628 Veazey street northwest. W. E. Parks, club treasurer, is a hardware man and Ellsworth D. Jones, club secretary, is a lawyer.

C. T. Kingsbury, 1916 Seventeenth street northwest, is a furniture maker and inlay artist on returing home from his Government office. W. H. Galbraith, of 3408 Tenth street northeast, is in the Federal Trade Commission.

They and the other kindred spirits in the organization meet once a month to swap tools and ideas.

"It keeps us from getting gray hairs before our time," says Bookbinder Simonds.

money to carry through the relief program.

"Obviously industry has not yet increased its employment sufficiently to permit the Government to withdraw its aid to the unemployed," he said. "Moreover, the severe drought of this summer required the use of a large sum of money which would otherwise be available for general unemployment relief. As a consequence, Congress will be asked to appropriate enough funds to carry the pro- and plans for the fiscal year 1938.

Saying that the relief estimate and plans fo the fiscal years 1938 will be made known later, the President continued:

"It is true now as it was last March when I stated: 'The ultimate cost of the Federal works program will * * * be determined by private enterprise. * * *' I am glad to note an increasing spirit of mutual helpfulness and of recognition of the fact that the way to end unemployment relief is to give work."

Perkins Credited.

Secretary Perkins last night was reported to have originated a plan by which larger industries would survey their plants, list all jobs suitable for older and unskilled workers, and then hire employes from those groups.

Johnson, whose company employs more than 5,000, told the Associated Press at New Brunswick, N. J., that the country must "give the wage earner his due" and added that "the simplest way is to pass a constitutional amendment, giving Congress authority to fix maximum hours of work, and then pass legislation to carry this out." He called for "shorter hours and higher pay."

He favored such hours "for all classes of balor," preferably through industrial co-operation, and said business leaders "would do well to support Maj. George L. Berry (the President's industrial co-ordinator) in his attempts to solve national unemployment."

A vigorous defense of American industry was included by Chester in his address before the Chicago Association of Commerce. He said it was up to industry to let the public know "how there has been under our industrial system a two-fold increase in the average standard of living since 1850; an increase in the share of national income going to wages and salaries from 38 per cent in 1850 to over 65 per cent today; a decrease in average weekly hours from 69 in 1850 to the present level." He urged, also, letting the public know that "three-fourths of the population are dependent upon business and industry" for their living, in order that the public "will not favor regulations harmful to business," since it would be doing harm to itself.

Would Take Initiative.

He urged that business take the initiative, in addition to the activities listed, in combatting any producing, distribution or labor monopolies, and in promoting a comprehensive program of modernization and replacement.

Meanwhile, here, Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, joined Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming, in the latter's drive for a Federal incorporation bill that would provide for regulations on child labor, minimum wages and maximum hours. O'Mahoney told the Associated Press that several Representatives have asked permission to sponsor the legislation in the House. It was expected Representative Mead (Democrat), of New York, would be active in pushing the legislation.

Silver Profits Tax Defended in Test

By the Associated Press.

Hope that "the time is not far distant when this Government will sit down with other nations to try to reach stabilization and solve the ills of the economic system" was expressed Wednesday by Robert Jackson, Assistant Attorney General, in arguing before the Supreme Court in behalf of the 1934 silver profits tax.

He told the justices the 50 per cent levy was essential "to prevent profiteering at the public expense" between the time the silver purchase act was proposed to Congress and signed by the President. The legislation directs Congress to purchase silver until it constitutes one-fourth of the Nation's monetary stock.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Piano recital by Helen McGraw in Willard Hotel ballroom Wednesday. Program: Prelude and Fugue in B flat minor (Bach), Fantasy in D minor (Mozart), Rhapsody in E flat major (Brahms), Sonata in A flat major, Op. 110 (Beethoven), Three Preludes: "Voiles," "Minstrels," "Ce qu'a vu le vent d'ouest" (Debussy), "Staendchen" (Strauss-Giesecking), Etude No. 4 (Stravinski), Sonata-Fantasy in G sharp minor, Op. 19 (Skryabin).

Helen McGraw is the most talented young pianist whom it has been my pleasure to hear for many a season. It is not merely because she plays with an easy mastery of the keyboard, for many share that accomplishment; it is what she does with her supple technique that arouses admiration. An instinctive artistry, quite personal in its sensible aura, is at the heart of her readings and imbues them with a communicable vitality. Intelligence is in vigilant command of her resources, keeping them in that sure control which allows liberty of poetic expression and forbids the license of excess.

Seldom does one encounter in a pianist of her years that knowledgeable acquaintance with the essential qualities of composers which she manifests. Each one on her list received the tribute of a signal distinction, the salute of an understanding sympathy. By her sensitive treatment of the Bach prelude and fugue, one realized that she knows the warm humanity beneath that mathematical music; in Mozart's naive fantasy, she discerned the innocent spirit that never became worldly amid the sophistications later forced upon it.

She knows that Brahms had a baritone mind and that he found his sensuous joy of the ear in the darker end of the tonal spectrum. Without that perception she would not have given so rich a texture to the E flat major rhapsody. She was in rapport with the vaporous imagination of Debussy as well, and gave to the three preludes of her choice their atmospheric values.

Her most remarkable penetration, however, was evidenced in her grasp of the Beethoven sonata and her comprehension of that evasive mystic, Alexander Skryabin. In her reading of Beethoven one felt a veritable communion with that lonely soul. And with Skryabin, whom she majority of pianists coarsen because they misinterpret his persistent eroticism, she was on terms of subtle affinity.

Sergt. Walker, Of Army Band, Dies in Hospital

Rites for Veteran Cornetist to Be Held Tomorrow at Walter Reed.

Sergt. William Henry Walker, 52, veteran cornetist of the United States Army Band, died late yesterday at Walter Reed Hospital following a brief illness. A native of St. Louis, Sergt. Walker, who had been a member of the band since its organization in 1922, lived with his family at 215 Flower avenue, Takoma Park, Md.

Enlisting in the Army 27 years ago, Sergt. Walker served for a number of years in the Philippines. During the World War he served in Siberia, with the small American Expeditionary Force sent there.

Sergt. Walker was a member of Takoma Park Post, No. 28, of the American Legion, and instructor of the drum and bugle corps of the Sons of the American Legion of that post.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Laurel Walker, a son, Harvey Walker, and two daughters, Alice Jayne and Faye Walker.

Funeral services will be held in Walter Reed Chapel tomorrow at 9 a. m. Burial, with the entire Army Band present, will be held under auspices of the American Legion in Arlington National Cemetery.

Mother-in-Law Sustained.

San Jose, Calif., Nov. 18 (AP).—Superior Judge William F. James ruled today that it is not cruelty for a husband to force his wife to live with her mother-in-law if the latter is an agreeable person and the home is "one of luxury and refinement." The ruling was made when the court denied Mrs. Beatrice W. Van Ness, jr., 48, of San Jose, a divorce from Thomas C. Van Ness, jr., 60, San Francisco attorney, who gave Van Ness the decree on his cross complaint.

Mayors Want U. S. to Merge Welfare Units

Conference Asks Congress to Set Up New Department, Extend PWA Life.

Consolidation of all welfare activities of the Government in a Department of Public Welfare, a permanent status for PWA and supplementary funds for the continuation of WPA through the present fiscal year were asked of Congress yesterday by the United States Conference of Mayors.

In a series of resolutions climaxing their three-day convention here, the city executives also recommended extension of the railway labor act to maritime transportation as a means of meeting future labor controversies similar to the present maritime strike.

The transportation resolution followed collapse of efforts by seaport mayors to arbitrate East and West shipping strikes through two boards to be appointed by the President.

As the mayors' strike overtures failed, Assistant Secretary of Labor McGrady redoubled efforts to bring shipowners and union representatives together at San Francisco, and the President moved to ease the threatened Alaskan food shortage by authorizing the Government-owned Alaskan railroad to operate Government and private ships to supply Alaska with food.

Economies Forecast.

The mayors' proposal of a Department of Public Welfare, often broached informally here, recommended consolidation of Government activities in the field of public welfare, including relief, social security, employment through public works and United States employment offices. The resolution said Congress should consider economies and efficiencies likely to result from a merger into one responsible agency.

Reiterating that work and not the "dole" is the "American way" of meeting the relief program, the conference asked deficiency appropriations to continue WPA, but failed to name a specific amount. It was claimed in discussions that $750,000,000 additional would be required.

Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York was re-elected president of the conference, and he and the executive committee were authorized to co-operate with Federal agencies in preparation of relief legislation.

LaGuardia also was authorized to appoint a committee of five to co-operate with Federal agencies in helping cities to get natural gas at reasonable rates.

Monopoly Charged.

John W. Smith, president of the Common Council of Detroit, and chairman of an alliance of eight cities in Midwest States crusading for natural gas at reasonable rates, charged a few holding companies have a monopoly of the natural gas supply and their officials are preventing cities from getting such service.

He urged that evidence he says is now in the hands of the Justice Department "should be submitted without further delay, without fear and without favor, to a grand jury."

Other resolutions adopted by the mayors' conference asked:

That Congress provide for public housing for low-income groups along the lines of the Wagner bill passed by the Senate last session.

Establishment of a Federal system for meeting the transient relief problem.

Creation by the Federal Trade Commission of a special unit to handle instances of collusion in connection with bids for supplies, materials and equipment required by cities.

Institution by the Government of a survey of the whole problem of municipal finance.

ger," portrayed by Morris Arkin, local actor, said:

"You think that you can arrest my power, you weakling? As long as man has lived, I have tormented him. Nations have whithered before me. No power has ever withstood me. Your own great Government has tried to check me and I laugh at you all. Today, here in Washington, people are hungry and even children, whom you pretend to love and protect, are crying because I scourge them.

Challenge Given.

"And do you think that I attack only the body? No, I am too clever for that. I pinch the soul and sap the courage and make men like beasts, fighting for food. You cannot hold me. I defy you. You may have locked me and my friends up for 172 days of 1937. But there are still 193 days of freedom for us next year and anyway, $5,394 a day won't entirely stop us. "Not a bit. You hold us too lightly. We'll show you!"

After "Hunger" had spoken, Dr. William McClellan, last year's campaign chairman, condemned him for "the scoundrel he is."

Dr. McClellan pointed out that success of the campaign depended on the army of Chest workers. He urged greater individual efforts and appealed to Washington citizens for help.

Herbert L. Willett, jr., campaign director, announced that only one chest unit has showed a gain over last year's progress record. The Metropolitan Unit, headed by Karl W. Corby, is 4½ per cent ahead of its progress last year, Willett reported.

Newbold Rallies Worker.

Newbold Noyes, of the Evening Star, and active campaign worker, warned workers not to let their duties become routine.

"Remember what the Community Chest stands for," he said, "and let your hearts take a part in the picture. Show Washington what must be done by citing individual cases—and Washington will rally to the cause."

Yesterday's unit reports and quota percentages are as follows:

Special assignments, reported by Mrs. Fedora Lewis—11 gifts totaling $3,350, making 79.23 per cent of quota reached.

Group solicitation, reported by Frederick G. Macarow—4,131 gifts totaling $25,544.71. 34.26 per cent of quota reached.

W. T. Kelly Addresses Law School Alumni

William T. Kelly, general counsel of the Federal Trade Commission, was principal speaker at the luncheon of the Georgetown Law School alumni at the Raleigh Hotel yesterday.

More than 125 members were present, and heard Kelly speak on "Federal Trade Commission Practice." Joseph A. Cantrel, first vice president, presided.

Rites Tomorrow For Mrs. Bollman

Mrs. Lena Bollman, 77, wife of the Rev. Calvin Bollman, one of the editors of the Seventh Day Adventist Review and Herald, died late yesterday in her home, 31 Westmoreland avenue, Takoma Park, Md., after a long illness.

A native of Nashville, Tenn., Mrs. Bollman came to Takoma Park with her husband 20 years ago.

She is survived by her husband, three daughters, Mrs. Ethel B. Cox, of Springfield, Tenn.; Mrs. Edna T. Howard, of Washington, and Mrs. Ruby B. Schofield, of Takoma Park, and three sons, Calvin E., Milton and George Bollman.

Funeral services will be held in Takoma Park Seventh Day Adventist Church tomorrow at 2 p. m., followed by burial in Washington Memorial Park.

HELP KIDNEYS PASS 3 LBS. A DAY

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, lumbago, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

If a Cold Threatens..

Timely use of this especially designed aid for nose and upper throat, helps prevent many colds.

WHAT'S IT LIKE?

NOT a Scotch
NOT a Rye
NOT a Bourbon

IT'S IRISH AMERICAN—A NEW PRODUCT FROM AN OLD, OLD HOUSE—OFFERING AN ABSOLUTELY NEW GOOD WHISKEY TASTE!

THE Colonel can't tell his friends much more than that. Neither can we. For Irish American has a velvety smoothness, a robust goodness and, above all else, an aroma and flavor which mark it as absolutely unique.

It is unlike any other whiskey in the world. It is not made like any other whiskey in the world. It does not taste like any other whiskey in the world. It is the only whiskey of its kind ever made for private use or public sale.

The robust character of imported pot still whiskey—the mild, mellow smoothness and lightness of fine Kentucky whiskey—these have been so artfully united that William Jameson actually has created a superb new whiskey flavor. This new flavor is delighting many men who, up to now, have been paying fancy prices for whiskies which only approach Irish American in taste.

What's it like? Let your own palate answer that question for you.

U. S. in Danger Of Boom, Says N. Y. Economist

Relief, Unions and Farm Aid Also Are Discussed at Engineer Dinner.

Predicting an increase in Government activity in business, Dr. Harow S. Person, New York City consultant in business economics and management, last night outlined to the Washington Society of Engineers four major problems which the country faces during the next four years.

Speaking at the engineers' annual dinner, held at the Hotel Mayflower, Dr. Person said he considered the most serious problem today is that of preventing the present business acceleration "from becoming a runaway and turning into a boom." Such a boom, he declared, would have only a temporary value and, when over, would cause serious ill-effects.

Discusses Relief.

The speaker questioned whether the huge number of unemployed could ever again be absorbed into business and gave it as his opinion that Government relief must be continued in the form of increased activity in business.

In declaring "the craft union has outlived its usefulness largely because of the transfer of skill to equipment," Dr. Person forecast the emergence of industrial unions as collective bargaining unions. While he considers the position of labor is stronger today than ever before, he expressed the belief that the next four years would see strikes and unrest.

The fourth problem which Dr. Person considers important is that of agricultural adjustment. Some means must be found, he said, to bring about a more accurate and equitable adjustment between the farmer's income from his product and what he has to pay for goods.

Dr. Goldenweiser Speaks.

Dr. E. A. Goldenweiser, chief economist of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, explained the workings of the system to the engineers. He said the system, though it could influence the value of money, could not deal adequately with the entire economic structure and, in particular, could not control such intangible factors as "boom psychology."

Other speakers were Prof. Henry J. Jacoby and A. B. McDaniel. Col. L. B. Strickler, vice president of the society, presided. The president, Admiral R. S. Patton, was prevented by illness from attending.

Dr. R.W. Duffey Rites to Be Today

Funeral services for Dr. Roger W. Duffey, 74, a retired Washington pharmacist, will be held at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Layman J. Redden, at Denton, Md., today at 11 a. m. The services will be conducted by the Rev. Milton S. Andrews, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery, at 3 p. m.

Stricken Sunday while touring in Pennsylvania with relatives, Dr. Duffey died yesterday in a hospital at Lancaster, Pa.

A native of Caroline County, Md., he was the son of the late Dr. Hugh Duffey, of Hillsboro. He was a graduate of the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy, and formerly owned several drug stores in Washington. After he retired from business he went to Denton to live with his daughter, Mrs. Redden.

Besides his daughter and his grandson, Roger Redden, he is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Charles Farrell, of Hillsboro, and Mrs. Oscar Clark, of Denton. Dr. Depew Duffey, of Washington, is his nephew.

Democratic Rule Held Hope of Jews

The only hope for the Jews of the world is adherence to the democratic principles of government, Dr. Abram L. Sachar, professor of modern history at the University of Illinois, told a capacity audience at the Jewish Community Center last night. He has just returned from an extensive tour of Europe.

"Palestine and the United States and France are the great nations where Jews can find both spiritual and political peace," asserted Dr. Sachar.

Dr. Sachar, who is a national director of the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundations, reviewed the situation in the Old World, and stressed particularly the conflicts of dictatorships.

"Fascism and communism have made the Jew their sorry victim," he declared, adding that in Russia the Jew could find no spiritual expression.

Man Held After Fire Fatal to His Wife

A 28-year-old colored woman, Mrs. Laura Slater, was burned to death last night when fire gutted a second floor room at 485 Cullinanes court southwest.

The woman's husband, Charles Slater, colored, 36, was treated at Emergency Hospital for burns on the hands and arms, suffered when he tried to drag his wife from her bed, which was in flames. Afterward he was held for investigation at the Fourth Precinct Station.

Police say the man hurled a lighted kerosene lamp at his wife, who was lying in bed. Firemen fought for more than an hour before they subdued the blaze on the second floor of the two-story brick building.

Pioneer Phonemen Mark Anniversary

Marking the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of the Telephone Pioneers of America, more than 250 Washington telephone pioneers, men and women who have completed 21 or more years of telephone service, will attend a dinner in the Lee House this evening.

Feature of the gathering will be a conversation, through the long-distance circuits and loud speaking equipment, with 174 similar gatherings throughout the United States and Canada. All these pioneer gatherings will listen to a special program originating in New York City, Newark, N. J., and St. John, New Brunswick.

It was estimated last night that more than 25,000 telephone pioneers and their guests would hear addresses by Walter Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co., who will be the principal speaker.

50 Fishermen Drift Out in Lake on Ice

Winnipeg, Nov. 18 (AP).—More than 50 fishermen were reported adrift on an ice flow in Lake Manitoba late today and the government dispatched an airplane to the rescue.

First reports said that between 50 and 60 men were on the floe which broke off from shore ice in Clandeboye Bay at the south end of the lake and about 100 miles northwest of Winnipeg.

FHA Will Seek Broader Scope For Insurance

McDonald Cites Plan to Cover Mortgages on Nearly All Properties.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New Orleans, Nov. 18.—Extension of the Federal Housing Administration's mortgage insurance authority to cover mortgages on practically all types of residential properties, and all other kinds of property except possibly that classified as mercantile and industrial is under consideration, Stewart McDonald, housing administrator, said here today.

Addressing the National Association of Real Estate Boards, McDonald described the extensive progress made in the real estate and building industry, but pointed out there is much more to be done.

He confirmed the story in The Washington Post of Tuesday morning that the Housing Administration will seek extension by Congress of the Government guarantee of debentures issued in exchange for properties which are conveyed to the Administrator because of default under insured mortgages.

Dealing with the Mortgage Insurance Authority, the Administrator said changing the name of the Low-Cost Housing Division to Large-Scale Housing Division had been suggested, in addition to extension of the insurance coverage to all types of homes except slum clearance operations or high-grade properties where builders and occupants are able to use their money as they see fit.

Suggested extension of insurance operations to cover other kinds of property might have many advantages, he said, including closer cooperation of real estate financing, and providing a check on "the kind of disastrous overbuilding, and promiscuous financing" which occurred in the 1920's.

It would strengthen enormously, he said, the possibility of creating national mortgage associations or mortgage discount banks, and might lend protection to "the public's gigantic investment in real estate."

Declaring he was inclined to favor the suggestions, McDonald revealed that a committee of experts has been charged with examining the subject and reporting at the earliest possible date.

Warning against a real estate boom as a "calamity" was voiced by Parker Webb, of Boston, former chairman of the brokers' division, at the convention.

Previously, President Walter W. Rose, of Orlando, Fla., had told the 1,200 delegates that the current year "has seen a definite upturn in every factor affecting real estate."

Instead of a boom, Webb hoped for a gradual, healthy increase in values.

The association received a report from its housing committee, headed by John C. Mowbray, Baltimore, urging the Federal Government to discontinue its building and housing projects.

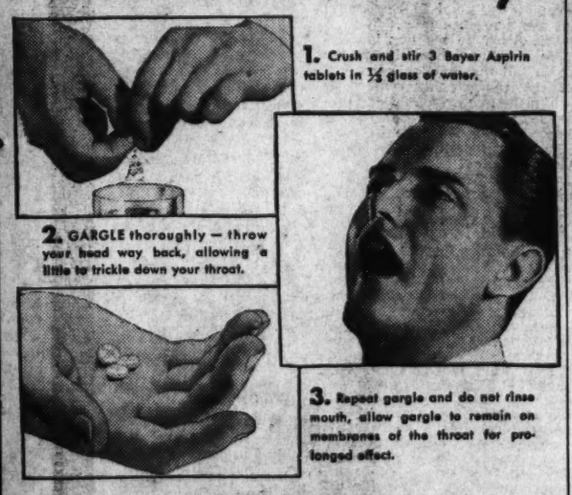
Sore Throat Pains
DUE TO COLDS
Eased Instantly



1. Crush and stir 3 Bayer Aspirin tablets in ½ glass of water.
2. GARGLE thoroughly — throw your head way back, allowing a little to trickle down your throat.
3. Repeat gargle and do not rinse mouth, allow gargle to remain on membranes of the throat for prolonged effect.

Just Gargle This Way with Bayer Aspirin

Here is the most amazing way to ease the pains of rawness of sore throat resulting from a cold we know you have ever tried.

Crush and dissolve three genuine BAYER ASPIRIN tablets in one-third glass of water. Then gargle with this mixture twice, holding your head well back.

This medicinal gargle will act almost like a local anesthetic on the sore, irritated membrane of your throat. Pain eases almost instantly; rawness is relieved.

Countless thousands now use this way to ease sore throat. Your doctor, we are sure, will approve it. And you will say it is marvelous.

Get the real BAYER ASPIRIN at your druggist's by asking for it by its full name — not by the name "aspirin" alone.

Dr. Tugwell's Resignation.

Several members of the President's official family have resigned during the last three years because of vigorous disagreements over policies. That is not true in the case of Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell. Nevertheless, his resignation is in many ways the most significant that the President has accepted.

There is every indication that Mr. Roosevelt and Dr. Tugwell are parting official relationships with mutual good will. The latter's statement that his resignation was entirely in response to his own desires should be accepted at face value. It is reported that he has been eager to leave the Government service for some time. The more significant fact is that the President is now willing to see him go.

Dr. Tugwell held a key position among the New Deal's experimenters through most of the President's first term. He became the symbol of hastily concocted schemes to carry the more abundant life to underprivileged groups through direct Federal appropriations. His Resettlement Administration is perhaps the most astounding Governmental agency ever set up in Washington to remold nature nearer to the heart's desire.

One factor that may have hastened Dr. Tugwell's announcement is the prospective liquidation of the RA. This agency's diverse activities, which frequently duplicate the work of other branches of the Government, will be the easiest possible mark for the conscientious groups now studying reorganization of Federal bureaus, boards and conglomerate "administrations." Conversely Dr. Tugwell's departure will probably leave the RA without a chance of survival in its present form.

As the second inaugural approaches, various other changes in the President's official family may be expected. He has clearly indicated that his second Administration is likely to have a tempo different from that of his first. Certainly the time for haphazard experimentation, if it could ever be justified, has passed. With his alertness to public sentiment, Mr. Roosevelt probably learned a great deal during the campaign as to what the people expect of him.

Since the hurdle of a second popular indorsement has been cleared, he is in a position to devote himself whole-heartedly to the business of consolidating gains already tentatively achieved and of planning the next steps with care that was unknown in the hectic days of 1933-35.

The Bluff That Failed.

If the conciliatory atmosphere which pervades the convention of the American Federation of Labor at Tampa had been present in Washington when the C. I. O. unions were suspended, organized labor in this country would not now be split into two hostile camps. A few months ago the federation's executive council insisted upon disciplining the insurgent unions led by John L. Lewis, in spite of grave doubt as to its authority to take such action. Now an attitude of repentance is clearly evident. But it may have come too late.

It is difficult to explain this change of sentiment without assuming that the executive council did not realize the seriousness of its ultimatum to the C. I. O. No doubt President Green and his supporters expected to subdue the insurgent unions by a mere threat of disciplinary action. If so, they completely failed to understand the character and ambitions of Mr. Lewis. The cause of organized labor has suffered extensively for that mistake.

The trend of sentiment at Tampa indicates, however, that Mr. Green and his colleagues have learned a great deal since they widened their differences with the C. I. O. into an open breach. There seems to be very little demand among the convention delegates for revocation of the insurgent unions' charters. Mr. Green has not only cautioned the federation against "drastic action," he is also striving to keep open every avenue that may lead to a compromise. Thus he has gone a long way toward winning back the confidence and support which he lost because of the council's arbitrary action.

Responsibility for either bridging or widening this schism now shifts to Mr. Lewis. If he is interested chiefly in the cause of labor, he will submerge his antagonism and meet Mr. Green halfway. But if his chief objective is to use the C. I. O. to further his own political ambitions, no deviation from his present uncompromising attitude can be anticipated. The weight of responsibility thus resting upon Mr. Lewis is further emphasized by the general assumption that the controversy would be speedily terminated if the personal bitterness involved could be eliminated.

One other step at Tampa is needed, however, before the majority faction can press its peace overtures without question as to their sincerity. The suspension of the C. I. O. members resulted from their organization activities along industrial lines as opposed to the older type of craft unions. If the A. F. of L. is to continue as a unified labor body some provision must be made for more effective organization of mass-production workers.

If the convention is able to work out such a formula, it should have no difficulty in cutting the ground from under Mr. Lewis. But if it fails to alleviate this fundamental grievance, mere conciliatory sentiment is not likely to carry very far.

A Colonial Battlefield.

The recognition as a de facto government extended to the Spanish rebels by Germany and Italy brings the disastrous situation in the Iberian peninsula no nearer to a constructive outcome. On the contrary, it emphasizes the inflammatory character of the Spanish civil war, now clearly revealed as a life-and-death struggle between two opposing social systems rather than as a mere domestic upheaval.

Foreign military observers at Madrid have referred to the terrible scenes enacted there during the past fortnight as a "dress rehearsal" for the next war. The phrase is the more arresting because in no way overdrawn.

Here in one of Europe's great capitals are being enacted the scenes portrayed with uncanny foresight by H. G. Wells in "The Shape of Things to Come." The crowds cowering in subway stations below the city streets; the corpses strewn along what were once prosperous boulevards; the looting of great stores which have been burst asunder by shell fire—all these are portents on a modest scale of what another war would mean in Europe. For military victory is no longer a matter of overcoming armies in the field. It is achieved, as Gen. Franco was quick to recognize, by paralyzing an adversary's nerve centers; by blasting his cities and demoralizing the civilian life therein.

This "dress rehearsal" aspect of the fighting at Madrid is emphasized by the fact that it is foreign intervention which has made the picture so ghastly. Gen. Franco, whose "government" is now recognized by the powers which have supplied him with aviators, bombs and other lethal equipment, is only a puppet dependent for success on the support of Berlin and Rome. That Fascist support, furthermore, has operated to denationalize the loyalist cause, the resistance of which has unquestionably been strengthened by aid from Russia. Not the least poignant part of the Spanish tragedy is the way this once great colonial power has itself become a colonial battlefield for the rival systems of fascism and communism.

So the recognition which Hitler and Mussolini have extended jointly and simultaneously to their Spanish tool is merely a dropping of the mask. Doubtless they will now give openly and on a larger scale the assistance which heretofore they have granted surreptitiously. It is not improbable that German and Italian warships will soon be ordered to blockade the Spanish coast, to see that the legally constituted Spanish government receives no further Russian shipments. And even without such action it becomes incumbent upon France and Great Britain to decide whether or not to accept passively this outrageous termination of the non-intervention agreement which Premier Blum initiated at the outbreak of the revolt in Spain.

Whether or not Japan, Germany and Italy have concluded a definite anti-Russian alliance, aiming at the eventual dismemberment of the Soviet state, is still a matter of speculation. But there is no doubt whatsoever that between Rome and Berlin there is a definite working agreement to establish Franco in control at Madrid in return for concessions which are as yet undisclosed. And the tragedy is that this deal can be prevented only by Anglo-French action of a character which would make a general European war more probable.

A year ago, when sanctions were belatedly directed against Italy, it was clearly possible to check that aggressive onward march of dictatorships which is spelling the downfall of European civilization. French hesitation to offend Italy then has in twelve short months been followed by the relegation of France to the precarious and uninfluential position in which she finds herself today. The ring of steel round Germany is changing to a ring of fascism round France. And the grandeur that was Spain passes to leave the prospect of a ruined people whose destiny is that of servitude to foreign masters.

Mme. Schumann-Heink

The great contralto voice of Ernestine Schumann-Heink was in the heyday of her career as operatic and concert singer one of the most glorious ever heard. For range, for warmth of coloring, for dramatic fire and intensity it was unsurpassed in our times. No one who ever heard it can possibly forget the experience. And it was the world's good fortune that her career spanned so long a period of years. Making her debut in 1878 her triumph was immediate. Yet it was only a few months ago that she gave her last concert over the radio.

But even greater than Mme. Schumann-Heink's triumph as a singer was her triumph as a human being. Again and again she faced adversities that seemingly would have wrecked the spirit of the strongest. During the World War her sons were to be found bearing arms on both sides of the lines. With indomitable courage she carried on. And since she had cast her lot with the American people it was this Nation that she served with undeviating loyalty. Hundreds of thousands of American soldiers heard her sing, and long after the Armistice she did all she could for those who had suffered in the struggle.

No wonder, then, that her great-heartedness, her ardent individuality, endeared her to millions who came to know her only in recent years when her vocal powers were already in decline. It is as a personality as well as an artist that she will be remembered with affection and gratitude by the people of her adopted country and many other lands.

A Step In Time.

The open-market committee of the Federal Reserve System, which is meeting in Washington today, is confronted by a problem calling for earnest consideration and possibly early action. That problem is the steps which should be taken to guard against the inflationary menace of a mounting volume of excess reserves and abnormally easy money-market conditions.

When suggestions for cutting down excess reserves were first seriously made over a year ago, fears were expressed that any efforts at credit control would have a bad psychological effect and retard business recovery. Today the business upturn has acquired a momentum that makes such fears seem baseless. There is no longer any need for clinging to credit policies designed to restore confidence. On the contrary, there is ground for fearing that undue optimism as to the outlook may lead to business and speculative excesses unless preventive action is taken.

Just as "pump priming" has to be undertaken promptly to combat successfully the deflationary forces of a depression period, so must restriction measures be imposed well in advance of an inflationary expansion of credit that threatens disaster of another sort.

When the Reserve Board increased the reserve requirements of member banks by 50 per cent last August, we expressed a hope that it would have the courage to resort to more positive kinds of restraint later on, if conditions made such action necessary. Since then the volume of excess reserves, which dropped from $3,260,000,000 to $1,790,000,000 after the change in reserve requirements, has risen to $2,260,000,000, due to heavy gold imports and Treasury operations. The open-market committee, therefore, might well consider whether the situation warrants a further increase in required reserves, or a reduction in the amount of Government securities held by the Reserve banks, or a combination of the two.

Excess reserves could be drastically reduced without imposing any undue restraint upon the expansion of credit for legitimate business purposes. And the Reserve authorities would be assisting business progress of the right sort by serving notice of their intention to curb inflationary credit manifestations.

The raising of reserve requirements has already been tried without untoward results. The alternative plan of permitting the Government holdings of the Federal Reserve banks to "run off" as they mature would provide another and more familiar method of absorbing the excess reserves of member banks, which would be called upon to take up the renewal issues. This method of tightening credit would avoid direct sales of "Governments" in the open market and thus reduce the danger of any sharp decline in the value of Government issues.

In such ways the pressure upon the banks to utilize idle funds in financing unsound business and speculative ventures might be greatly reduced, provided, of course, the Federal Government takes prompt action to reform its fiscal policies. So long as deficit financing continues to fill our banks with Government securities and to swell the volume of bank deposits to unhealthy proportions, the opportunities for effective credit control by the Federal Reserve System will be inevitably limited.

The Lepers' Revolt in Manila.

From the Brooklyn Daily Eagle.

Newspapers have seldom carried a more fantastically grewsome story than that from Manila telling how 235 lepers in the San Lazaro Hospital rebelled and marched to the Malacanan Palace to demand from President Manuel Quezon the right to go home. Having had a talk with the President's secretary, they returned to the hospital. Readers of the Old Testament and also of the New will recall incidents in which lepers figured and which probably were responsible for the fact that it is by laymen the most feared of all diseases.

The revolt of the Filipino lepers will recall the single-handed revolt of John R. Early, the former American soldier in the Philippines who was detected as a leper in Washington, D. C., on April 13, 1908, and was segregated in a comfortable hut on the Potomac. Early escaped and fled to New York, where efforts were made to segregate him or to return him to Washington.

Early was really a martyr to science. His case led to a worldwide intensified study of the disease, with the object of determining whether it is contagious. The almost unanimous scientific opinion today is that it is not contagious and the lepers should not be regarded as more of a menace than are the victims of a number of other disease, whereas before Early even the average physician dreaded the thought of having a leper accidentally among his patients.

Race And Nationaltiy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Few modern questions interest me more than the Jewish one. The Post's brief report on the debate in New York City on "Should Judaism be the Way of the Jew?" quotes Rabbi Landman as saying: "Without his Judaism, the Jew has no excuse for living." He then is quoted later as saying: "Judaism stresses the brotherhood of man; Nazi-ism the brotherhood of one nation."

Benjamin Stolberg, debating the other side of the question, is quoted as saying that "consciousness of race, nationality, or religion becomes a reactionary force tending to hinder the Jew."

As one who believes that the Jew at his best is as fine a product of manhood as the world has seen or will see, I ask space to say that the rabbi that stressed Judaism as the only excuse for a Jew's living, while contending that the Germans are opposed to world brotherhood because they wish to preserve their national race qualities, involves himself in hopeless inconsistency.

Without for a moment advocating the German procedure, I heartily agree with the position of Mr. Stolberg, that (particularly in a country like ours) assimilation is the only solution to peaceful adjustment, if the Jew wishes to make America his home. There is no more reason for "separateness" on the part of the Jew than for the German, or Italian or Englishman to seek to form a distinct racial group within the United States.

If any contingent of Jews would live in complete isolation, so far as racial intermixture is concerned, let those men seek some such place as Palestine, and make of it a country as truly "national" as the Germans are trying to make Germany. But if any group of men believe in the brotherhood of man, let that group forsake the obsolete idea of trying to live, in a democratic country like ours, in any sort of racial exclusiveness.

This is only one man's opinion, but I feel better to express it.

The Newly Unemployed.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The newspapers carry the story of District police raiding a men's hotel and taking 90 of the inmates into custody. We are told that this action was taken in order to rid the city of petty thievery which has appeared with the colder weather.

I am asking why anyone can reasonably expect anything else but outbreaks of thievery when there exists at present no method of relieving the newer victims of the depression.

People who so far have been able to keep off the relief rolls and now find themselves at the end of their resources have no way of obtaining either temporary relief or work on WPA projects.

There exists at present no agency to investigate and certify the need for relief of such able-bodied unfortunates. We must remember that self-preservation is the first law of Nature, and, really, if the community stupidly refuses to recognize the needs of the unemployed, it seems that we must be prepared to pay the price of our stupidity. In the opinion of this writer, this will take the form of a continuance, and possibly an increase, of the present deplorable wave of holdups and crime in general. Is it too late to take some action to avoid this?

A Word For Abattoirs.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Can politics, a hangover of the recent two-sided smearing campaign, be creeping into the civic life of Washington?

The Howard football team, on strike, prefers movies to mauling, and disdains to perform on cheers and the college type of spirit alone. Tenants not yet aware of their identity abandon apartments not yet built or approved because an abattoir threatens to go into heavy action down the railroad tracks across from the junk yard.

Inspectors, commissioners, agricultural secretaries, re-elected presidents and assorted esthetes have so far been lured into the controversy. Why? All because the sacred purity of the beautiful Washington is menaced by the bleat of fallen heifers and the fumes incident to their conversion into baloney.

I come to bat for the abattoir as a mere private citizen. The nearest object of sacred grandeur is the Capitol, four miles by the crow. G. H. Q. of bureaucracy is still farther off. The environment is nothing to engage the talents of landscape artists, being, you might say, ideal for abattoirs. Locomotives on sidings send up gaseous fumes by the hour, against overhead electric wires. The nearest residence section, blocked off by the bridge, is well to windward. Another, further off, was built when the plant was going full blast. It is unknown whether the evil effects of plant fumes were used as a selling point.

This plant is not being built on virgin territory. No catastrophe or violent protest attended its previous operation, under cruder methods. Its revival should be permitted on a time limit, in deference to the yet-to-be-constructed parks. Washington could bear to cease functioning as a haven for the politically faithful long enough to welcome back a revenue-producing industry.

Prophecy Or Nightmare?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The writer had a dream last night that was not only greatly disturbing but was so vivid and realistic that it partook of the nature of a prophecy, a prophecy born of a vision that was prompted by a deep psychological inspiration.

I was walking down a great highway. The air was balmy, and billions of stars twinkled and scintillated in the cloudless sky. I had gone but a short distance when I began to encounter ominous monuments along the sides, standing like warning sentinels. The first had upon it in letters of fire the word "inflation." Farther on was another monument more sinister and repelling in its somberness, and near its top were the words "National Bankruptcy." A feeling of uneasiness and anxiety came upon me, but I continued my way until I neared the end of the road.

I noticed that the stars had disappeared, the sky had become overcast, and the low mutterings of thunder could be heard, and suddenly there appeared before me out of the darkness the most forbidding and terrifying of all the monuments, and it bore the sign, distinguishable even in the darkness, "Just beyond is social disintegration and ruin. Beware."

I awoke with a feeling of deep depression and apprehension, and earnestly prayed that it might prove only a dream, and not a prophecy of the future awaiting our beloved country.

Essay On Saluting.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It seems to me there appears to be a great controversy as to The Flag.

A flag is a symbol or an emblem of a nation, and when a good citizen of the United States salutes The Flag he salutes himself or rather pats himself on the back.

Salute is an acknowledgement of subordination, or honoring a superior. A citizen saluting the flag carried in a military parade is actually not saluting the flag but is giving due honor to the military forces that uphold and defend the country of which he is a citizen.

Therefore, when a soldier salutes an officer he is honoring a superior. When he salutes the flag he re-obligates himself to the country.

When a private citizen salutes the flag he is patting himself on the back. EDWARD WESTERLUND.

"The King Passed By."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: On Friday about 4:30 p. m. I passed out Bladensburg road northeast. For several blocks along the street, on both sides cars were parked bumper to bumper, and in some places parked double. Men, women and children lined the curbs and stood on the running boards of the parked cars.

Several police were stationed along the line of cars. At the District line eight or ten motorcycle police waited. Traffic was jammed on Eastern avenue. The patrol wagon was parked on Eastern avenue and quite a crowd was standing around. My curiosity was aroused, for a crowd like that always meant a fire or an accident. But I could see no fire nor fire wagons; no wrecks nor ambulances. What could cause such excitement? There was a scream of motorcycle sirens and I remembered this quotation:

"The people came from all the countryside and lined the highway down which he would pass. The mighty landlord in his coach with his retainers and footmen; the middle class in their Sunday best; the lowly peasant in his donkey cart; the blacksmith, the armourer, the merchant, the butcher, the baker and the candlestick maker. All were there to see. Some of the more active had climbed into the trees by the wayside for better vantage points; children were held high on their fathers' shoulders; necks were craned, and excitement prevailed.

"There was a blare of trumpets:

"And the king passed by."

Campaign Expenses.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Just so the page on which you run this won't have to be torn out of the copies you send to England, I won't mention any names.

But it seems to me our law requiring a man running for public office to tell the Senate how much he spent campaigning, and who gave him the money, would certainly embarrass a certain party over in England who seems to be running for the second highest office in the Empire.

RIVES MATTHEWS.

Another Cleric's View.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There seems to be a veritable eruption from reverend gentlemen in the Spanish situation, yet all on the side of the Foreign Legionnaires and the Moors. (To join the Foreign Legion it is necessary to answer one questionnaire as an intelligence test. It is: "Can you fight and will you fight?" It makes no difference what the fight is for, so long as you receive so much salary per.)

Let me apologetically come forth and suggest that Jesus needs no national guard of war-loving Moors to fight the battles of Jehovah. Place me, therefore, on the side of the legally elected people's Popular Front, the Loyalists, or so-called "reds."

As a part Spanish Catholic myself, I wish to state that all Catholics are not on the side of Gen. Franco, who has killed many defenseless women and children with bombs dropped (with safety to the aviators) from the air.

A Spanish priest of the Franciscan Order recently addressed an audience in New York City in defense of Cabellero and his "radical" (or democratic) regime. In protest against the use of the fierce Moors, he asked: "Since when has the crescent become the guardian of the Cross?" and as time goes by millions of Catholics, hearing "the cry of innocent blood," are going to ask themselves that question.

World On Wheels.

WHEN I was a small boy (said Captain Ebenezer Longbow to his cronies in the postoffice as they waited for the mail), which is more years ago than I care to remember, I used to go to the park to watch the men ride their bicycles. For bicycles were not for boys in those days. The front wheel was about twice as high as I was. An average-size man standing by the rear wheel, a small one, could just about reach the handle-bars. Mounting was quite a feat. The would-be rider put his left foot on a little step at the rear end of the framework, pushed off with his right foot, and then leaped into the air, landing, if he were expert, on the seat, and, if he were lucky, remaining there.

Some of the riders grew wonderfully clever. Old-timers in New Jersey (where Woodrow Wilson once pedalled daily to his labors) will tell you they thought nothing of riding on a rail—and I mean by that riding your thin-rimmed bicycle on a T-rail raised above the ties on the railroad. As a matter of fact it is on record (they tell me) that five men on a wager once rode down a single rail of the old Amboy road from Trenton to Camden; or four of the five did. The fifth was disqualified at Fishback (I think that was the name of the place), two and a half miles out of Camden. The contestants were allowed to dismount from their wheels on the approach of a train and then, when the train passed, they were supposed to get on again where they had gotten off. Well, the unfortunate fifth happened to get off, quite accidentally, when he didn't have the excuse of an approaching train. And that let him out. He didn't get any of the prizes. I haven't the slightest idea what they were or who gave them.

I never rode on one of those bicycles, so I wouldn't know what could be done, for as I grew up the wheels grew down; yes, sir, they grew smaller and smaller, and as they grew less chains and gadgets were added to them which made pedalling easy, or you could coast on them while holding your feet still on the pedals.

But long before that time was reached I had my first bicycle. It was a bone-shaker. That wasn't its trade name, but that was the name by which it was familiarly known. And it was by no means miscalled. The front wheel was about three feet in diameter, the back wheel a little less. Both were of wood, wooden hubs, spokes and rim with an iron band. It had no springs of any kind under the seat, and when you rode over cobblestones or even Belgian blocks, you felt it.

And when at last the "safety bicycle" was evolved we hobbledehoys were inclined to think that only sissies would ride anything so close to the ground. But we overcame our prejudices at last. My first safety had handle bars on it as big as the horns of a Texas steer. Bigger, curlier! Why, there were certain places on Pennsylvania Avenue where I had to ride with extra care. If I moved two or three inches to the right I'd sweep pedestrians off the sidewalk, and if I moved two or three inches to the left I'd block streetcar traffic.

And once at F and Fourteenth four of us coming in four different directions got our horns interlocked, and the resultant traffic congestion and the altercation in which we indulged ended with our being taken to the police station, where the sergeant behind the desk gave us a severe talking to before allowing us to depart.

And by and by the handle bars shrunk to normal size and everybody rode bicycles. Them was the days!

There were bicycle racks in all the Government buildings. The fact was mentioned in a recent Post article charmingly written. That, as a matter of fact, started me to think about them; that and the observation of Mr. Phelps that the Silent Steed was coming back.

It wasn't always a silent steed, incidentally. Ever so many young fellows carried gongs on their handle bars and did their best to make as much of a racket as a modern chronic honker. Ever so many of these lads were what were called scorchers; daredevils who went dashing along the street and turning corners at 10 and 15 miles an hour.

People not only rode to work on their bicycles the world over but they took their recreation on bicycles. Instead of hiking clubs there were bicycle clubs. The man who rode 100 miles in a day was distinguished. Lots of clubs did it.

And the automobiles came along and were followed by good roads; and the bicycles, which could have used good roads, faded away. Oh, yes, you'd see them here and there with boys on 'em, mostly messenger boys, and you'd see them parked outside of telegraph offices. And that was about all.

Eight or nine years ago I was in Bartram's Gardens, Philadelphia, and on the main driveway there was a sign (it may be there yet for all I know) which read, "No Scorching!" To youngsters it was puzzling; to oldsters it afforded quiet amusement; for you wouldn't see a bike in the gardens from one year's end to another.

And now the bicycle is coming back. I haven't any of the figures with me and they wouldn't interest you old birds anyhow.

Demosthenes McGinnis turned to his friends and demanded, "Where does this old bird think we've been all these years?"

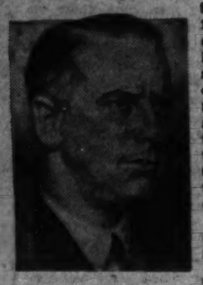
Football Wages.

The football colleges are inching toward honesty this year, but the maximum wage of $00 a month proposed for varsity men in some sections will have to be revised upward as soon as the customers realize that the game has become frankly pro. The sport customer believes that this hero, if he is paid at all, should be paid on the basis of his turnstile power, and a pay roll of, say, $30,000 to a squad of athletes who play to gate receipts ranging between $250,000 and $1,000,000 a season is just enough to indicate the college as an enemy of the working man.



Football on this scale ceases to be amateur sport and becomes a form of coolie labor, with the college in the role of a grasping, soulless corporation.

The patrons of the baseball business always took what might be termed a paternal interest in Babe Ruth and were on his side in all his little controversies with the management of the Yankee ball club in the matter of wages. They never had to worry much on Jack Dempsey's behalf or Gene Tunney's, but there would have been great indignation toward Tex Rickard if he had undertaken to hold them to any such scale of rewards as the colleges, with coy reluctance, are now proposing for penniless young students who are asked to face a much more punishing course of play.

Of course, it is a gain when certain colleges are willing to admit the bare fact that they hire their football men. The customers have known, or strongly suspected as much for some years, and football being the national institution that it is, there is progress in the willingness to concede the obvious. Most of us have been hidebound on the question of professionalism, for we liked to regard football as pure heroics, even though we were convinced that it was an industry.

The acceptance of the facts is of a piece with the new attitude toward the Constitution, the Supreme Court and the States. Suddenly it is admitted that football is a branch of the show business, like baseball and pugilism, and we breathe more easily and find that it doesn't hurt us much.

The football player works for the profit of not only the college but for the railroads, the gas and automobile companies, the hotels, roadhouses, restaurants, florists, telegraph companies, newspapers and ticket printers.

• • • •

The chamber of commerce frankly regards the team as a business asset, and in some cases is grateful enough to put up a pot of a few thousand dollars a year to pay star players. The merchants get the money back through their cash registers on the autumn afternoons when thousands of customers are drawn to town, and the only fault to be found with that custom is its furtiveness and the stinginess of the rewards.

In many cases the head coach receives a percentage of the gate receipts in addition to his base pay, and this is not to argue that he is undeserving, for most coaches are career men and colleges are merciless employers which accept no substitutes for success in football. There is no substitute, because success pays and failure doesn't, and they can't use any substitute for gate receipts in paying their bills.

But up to this time it has never been admitted that a player with great personal box office appeal—or b. o., as they call it in the show business—deserved a percentage of the gate. He may have been paid, but at most he received no more than a preliminary fighter or a minor league baseball player, whereas, being paid at all, he deserved as much as he was worth. This might be as little as $1,200 a year for a colorless guard or blocking back or $50,000 a year for a box-office athlete such as Red Grange, Red Eagle or Bobby Grayson.

And to argue that it is bad for a student to make so much money so early in life is to fall back on theory. Nobody has yet established the precise age at which it is good for a young man to make his pile, and the principle on which most of us proceed is to get it while the getting is good. A football player can't go back and get it when he is 30 years old, seven or eight years out of school and broke, with a family on his hands.

Any agreement between colleges that football players may be paid, but not paid more than $80 a month, or any other arbitrary and niggardly figure, as compared to his b. o., is plainly contrary to the spirit of the country and its laws. It smacks of a conspiracy to restrict wages, and the wages are very petty in proportion to the workman's value.

It need not be argued, either, that the college furnishes the traditions and the ivy and that these have b. o., too. A good team makes its own traditions, and a thousand dollars will buy enough ivy to do.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Trial by Committee.

Mussolini has abolished the civil and criminal courts of Italy. This forces lawyers to work for a living and definitely precludes the chances of a good ward worker becoming a bad judge. Benito has the idea that "I object" is a poor keynote in a country's search for truth and justice.

• • • •

Hereafter Mussolini will have litigants or lawbreakers go before committees to be named by the state. The committees will be made up of specialists in whatever matters are involved.

• • • •

It will seem a little goofy at first, arresting a man for airing his dog without a muzzle in the park and trying him before a committee of Italians who have been bitten by dogs.

• • • •

And suppose a man gets ptomaine poisoning eating a shore dinner and sues the management. Will the committee which tries the case be made up of three former victims of lobster poisoning, a couple of clam diggers and a bicarbonate of soda magnate?

• • • •

Can you picture the trial reports if the idea ever took hold in the United States:

Mrs. T. P. "Toots" Waffleiron, who shot her husband during a cabaret show one night last summer, goes on trial tomorrow before Committee No. 547-A. The committee members include Mrs. Arabelle Gonchbonch, who slew her mate with an axe in the spring of 1933, three women who put arsenic in their husbands' tea, four men who have wound stripes as a result of domestic disturbances and a fellow who thinks anything that enlivens a floor show is excusable.

• • • •

Peter "Tin Box" Bozzleblott, well-known political leader, accused of collecting graft money in his district, will be tried Thursday. Nine of the eleven members of the trial committee have had wide experience as graft collectors. Mr. Bozzleblott has no fears.

• • • •

Miss Jeanette Pootle, who is suing a hotel because of injuries sustained when she dived into a pool from which the water had been extracted, will not be tried for some time. Considerable trouble is being experienced in getting a committee of dry swimmers.

Erasmus The Modern

Sixteenth Century Scholar, Theologian, Peace Lover And Humanitarian Honored On 400th Anniversary Of His Death.

By Lester K. Born.

Chairman, Washington Erasmus Committee.

THIS YEAR, 1936, is remarkable for many reasons. A random list would certainly include the national election in the United States, the civil war in Spain, the conclusion of the Ethiopian campaigns, the celebration of the international Olympic games at Berlin, the proclamation of a new King of England.

Many thousands of people in many widely distributed lands would also add at least one more item. This year marks the 400th anniversary of the death of Desiderius Erasmus of Rotterdam.

Erasmus was not a great popular leader who swept all before him in his favor. He was no great soldier who won a name by his strategy. He was no robust athlete. In his veins flowed no royal blood. What, then, is his claim to remembrance and reverence 400 years after he departed this mortal world?

The answer is very simple. Erasmus possessed in his inner being those qualities which are of the deepest significance, and which are bound neither by space nor by time. He was no soldier, but he fought unfailingly for the cause of human betterment. He was no royal ruler, but he dominated the spiritual world of humane letters in every western land. He was no popular statesman, but he possessed the precious vision of international peace and harmony. He was no physical scientist, but he searched unceasingly for pure truth and sound reasoning. It probably is not an overstatement to say that if the social and ethical philosophy of Erasmus had been accepted by the temporal and ecclesiastical rulers of his day the history of the last 400 years would have been greatly altered, and the present world would be a much better place to live in.

This important philosophy is manifested in three main channels: education, religion, social science. It is impossible completely to separate the threads of these three in discussing the reforms of Erasmus, for they were intimately bound together in the mind of their sponsor.

Erasmus Stressed Ethical Conduct.

ALL THREE he conceived as resting upon the same fundamental basis of individual responsibility and ethical conduct. This was indeed a "modern" idea, yet to call Erasmus a reformer is an unfortunate thing, for the term often suggests activity and change that borders upon violence in its physical expression.

No such association is connected with Erasmus; his vigor lay entirely in the mind. He realized fully that the success of his philosophy rested upon the desire of others to put it into effect. That his ideals have yto to be realized to any great extent is no criticism of him. It is, rather, an indictment of human nature.

To change the other worldliness of the Middle Ages into a practical recognition of contemporary problems was a task which only education could perform. The humanists set themselves the job of correcting educational methods to a point where they would serve to convey pure thought, induce original thinking, and permit the dissemination of new doctrines. Of course free and general education was impossible in the sixteenth century. This Erasmus knew, and he planned his texts and his theories accordingly.

Education he admitted was the privilege of the few, but he also insisted that it was their responsibility. The kings, nobles and churchmen ruled the land. Their views were the views imposed unalterably upon the people. Therefore, a new idea set forth in reformed educational theory, if accepted by the few, immediately became effective over the masses. Educating a prince of a reigning house in the sixteenth century was comparable to educating the general public today. Each sets the tone of national life and policy.

It is as a theologian that Erasmus is probably least loved and appreciated In his own day he was abused by both factions in the tumult of the Reformation. His outspoken criticisms of the laxity, the worldliness, and the unenlightenment within the Roman Catholic Church earned him little thanks. His refusal to partake in the violence of the Lutheran party alienated him from them. If the first group had heeded his advice there probably would have been no Reformation. If the reformers had not had the benefit of his scholarship and teachings on the subject of Biblical interpretation their task would have been harder. In his various tracts, and in his textual studies, Erasmus insisted upon the practice in daily life of non-dogmatic Christianity. The world was slow to follow his lead.

AS A POLITICAL philosopher Erasmus has been appreciated only within the last 20 years. Of course his doctrines were known and read, but they were neglected in the pursuit of those propounded by others. The social concepts of Erasmus were not original. They could not have been, because they were based upon a thorough comprehension of the principles developed over a period of several thousand years.

Erasmus lived in a period of turmoil and struggle, of war and poverty, of intense national feeling, of imperial expansion. From the quiet of his study he could give calm consideration to problems which would have been obscured in the minds of a man in the midst of the confusion. Through his friendship with kings, nobles, churchmen and scholars of all countries he gained his contact with the practical world. His doctrines were no doubt idealist—unfortunately they still are—but they were not mere theorizings by an impractical academician.

The key to the threefold contributions of Erasmus lies in his scholarship. That was strongly influenced by his travels. Erasmus was educated first in his native Netherlands, and then at Paris. Ostensibly a theological student, he was a profound admirer of the literature and culture of the ancient world. On his journey to Italy he came in first-hand contact with the renascence of that culture. England made further contributions. Through his publishers in Belgium and Switzerland he himself aided in the dissemination of that culture through sound and handsome texts. The establishment of an accurate text, and the understanding of that text without the media of allegorical interpretations was his ideal. This principle he applied to the substance of education and religion alike. From that substance comes his theories of social and political philosophy.

Other men have also made important contributions to the development of human knowledge. Why, then, should Erasmus be given so much consideration? It is difficult to give a short answer, but certainly these points will be outstanding: Because of his widespread contemporary influence, because of his establishment of the scientific approach to the study of the written word, because of his doctrine of free, continuous and critical thought, because of the universal application of his teachings.

On July 12 of this year Washington commemorated the quadricentenary of Erasmus' death by an international broadcast between Rotterdam and Washington, by appropriate services in the Washington Cathedral, by an exhibit of books at the Library of Congress, by a special cachet on several thousand letters to all parts of the world. Yesterday the Netherland-American Foundation, in conjunction with Columbia University, sponsored a series of observances.

Whether one is interested in literature, education, religion, political theory, or the general history of human knowledge, there is something of interest and value in Erasmus. His works are many and diverse. There is no better tribute to their writer than the reading or rereading of old favorites or newfound friends.

Moscow Angered By 'Rotten' Drama

Moscow, Nov. 18 (AP).—Russia's art critics turned their fire tonight against Alexander Tairov, director of the Moscow Kamerny Theater, for sponsoring productions alien to "Soviet socialist culture."

Criticism in the authoritative newspaper Izvesta asserted Tairov habitually had given the Soviet people the wrong kind of art and accused the veteran of harboring "rotten esthetic principles."

Cited as one of the chief targets of scathing criticism was Tairov's production of "The Egyptian Nights," which Izvestia called a 'nonsensical anti-art medley of Shaw, Pushkin and Shakespeare."

Tairov, who has been Russia's leading theatrical director for 20 years, was flayed by the newspaper for allowing "Trotskyite" productions at his theater, which is widely known abroad.

Triple Threat

By Barnet Nover

Rumor As An Instrument Of Policy.

DURING THE PAST five years three great rumors concerning the potential line-up of the powers in anticipation of another general conflict have swept the world. These are: (1) a German-Japanese alliance against Russia; (2) an Italo-German alliance designed to smash the European status quo; and (3) a union of the "dissatisfied" states against the "satisfied."

Now it is reported that all three of these potential combinations have become a reality. There is already in existence, it is said, a diplomatic alignment of Japan, Germany and Italy which, while ostensibly intended to serve as a defense against communism, actually is designed to make possible the achievement of the separate and ambitious aims of the three powers in Asia and in Europe.

If true, this report must be set down as one of far-reaching importance. With their satellites, Japan, Germany and Italy constitute a very formidable combination which, if simultaneously exerted in any direction, would have effects of incalculable proportions. Certainly verification of the current report would give substance to the never-stilled fears entertained by Russia that its existence is threatened. Yet, without minimizing the importance of whatever deal may have been made directly by Germany and Japan and indirectly by Italy, as Germany's friend, it is possible to argue that the appearance of this combination is far more threatening than the reality may prove to be.

• • • •

OF THE THREE recurrent rumors, the one concerning an alliance between Germany and Japan is the oldest. But it speaks volumes for the kaleidoscopic nature of international politics in the post-war period that the first time it made its appearance was as recently as 1933. Before that time, while there had been much talk of a Russo-Japanese war, there appeared to be no likelihood that such a development would coincide with a German attack on Russia.

Even in 1931 and 1932, Russo-German friendship, if no longer as ardent as it had been in the days of the Rapallo treaty, was still something to count on. But with the coming into power of Hitler and the program, adumbrated in "Mein Kampf," of German expansion to the east, this friendship vanished. No nations are more hostile to each other at the moment than Germany and Russia

Yet the common antagonism of Germany and Japan to the Soviet regime, and the fact that they may both have designs on Russian territory, do not necessarily mean that an offensive alliance between them is a certainty. On the contrary, insofar as the two are hostile to Russia it is unnecessary for them to dot the i's and cross the t's of the obvious.

• • • •

RECENTLY Russo-Japanese relations, while still far from good, have shown some signs of improvement. Only a fortnight ago a fisheries agreement, satisfactory to the Tokyo government, was signed and steps then taken to eliminate other sources of friction between the two nations.

This does not mean that the danger of war between the Soviet union and the island empire has been eliminated. Far from it. But it does mean that there is less danger of such a development than there has been. Japan appears to have plenty to do in China. Its encroachments on that nation are at last beginning to meet with resistance. Should existing Sino-Japanese tensions lead to war, Japan would obviously prefer to have Russia neutral than hostile.

In 1931 and 1932 when the Japanese were overrunning Manchuria and steadily encroaching on the Russian sphere of influence along the Chinese Eastern Railway, Russia was in no position to fight back. But since then it has developed its defenses in Eastern Siberia to a high degree. The Japanese have no reason to view with any degree of complacence the possibility of an air attack by Russian planes on the Japanese islands.

As for Germany, despite the frequently expressed desires of Nazi leaders to take over the Ukraine and other Russian territories, the fact remains that a direct attack on Russia is not possible without the support and connivance of Poland. For its part Poland has no desire to play the role of a German-Russian battlefield. Nor would any Italian purpose be served either by the aggrandizement of Germany or the aggrandizement of Japan at the expense of Russia.

• • • •

IT IS, THEREFORE, arguable that the German-Japanese agreement does not necessarily mean the formulation of plans for a joint attack on Russia. Indeed such a possibility can, for the time being, be ruled out. What, then, does it mean?

Japan, Germany and Italy are isolated powers. The first two have resigned from the League; the third has felt the sting of the League's animadversions. It is possible for them, therefore, by acting in concert, to exert considerable pressure on League states to reverse certain policies dictated by the League. Japan is eager to have Manchukuo recognized; Italy wants similar recognition given to its Ethiopian conquest. By raising the terrifying specter of a European-Asiatic Triple Alliance, Great Britain, France and possibly other powers may be intimidated in reversing their non-recognition stand.

But that is not all. The establishment of such a combination of powers is also likely to increase the pressure on Russia's allies, notably France and Czechoslovakia, to abandon their alliance with the Soviet Union and thus isolate Moscow. That would be both from the German and the Japanese point of view a welcome development indeed. And Italy, too, has no desire to see Russian influence in Central Europe grow. The fact that the Spanish loyalists, though receiving aid only from Russia, have been able to hold back the rebel tide at Madrid has unquestionably alarmed the Fascist powers as their action on recognizing Gen. Franco indicates. Finally there are certain trade advantages to be gained by the German-Japanese agreement. But the importance of this can easily be exaggerated.

In itself the German-Japanese or the German-Italian-Japanese combination, therefore, has a bearing only on certain specific problems of immediate concern. But the fears it will arouse, the rumors it will engender regarding aims and purposes unrevealed, can very easily be used as instruments of policy by the Fascist states. More than once have Germany and Italy bluffed Great Britain and France. Now, with the support of Japan, they are in a strong position to do so again.

Izaak Walton's "The Compleat Angler." This is a big quarto with nearly 200 pencil drawings. Although I hate fishing, I love this book.

Dickens' "Pickwick Papers" in one volume, and yet in good type—the first time such a thing has happened. It is illustrated with magnificent full-page, colored pictures.

"Green Mansions," the exquisite and terrible romance by W. H. Hudson, which seems now to have a permanent place of its own in the world's literature, is illustrated in color with an appropriate binding.

And now here is a wonderful book for children and I think for others. It is a splendid Mother Goose, the selection of pieces having been newly made by the American poet, William Rose Benet. There are 180 pages illustrated, 40 of them being in full color.

"Tom Sawyer," "Walt Whitman," and more novels of Dickens are coming.

The publisher of these beautiful volumes is The Heritage Press, New York.

Von Ossietzky To Spurn Nobel Prize, Is Report

Peace Award Is Considered Affront to Reich; Pacifist Changes Views.

By the Associated Press.

Oslo, Norway, Nov. 18.—The Aftenposten said today it understood Karl von Ossietzky, celebrated pacifist who has been released after three years' confinement in German concentration camps, would refuse the Nobel Peace Prize which he is understood to have been voted.

The newspaper also said Germany would consider the award to Von Ossietzky as an offense to the Third Reich.

Von Ossietzky, who even before Adof Hitler came to power was in difficulty with German authorities for disclosing German rearmament, was said to have changed his political views fundamentally.

Pacifist in Hiding.

Berlin, Nov. 18 (AP).—German authorities continued today to refuse to divulge the whereabouts of Karl von Ossietzky, pre-Hitler pacifist, who was released from a hospital recently after more than three years spent in concentration camps.

Some reports said he was in Pomerania, others that he had gone to Mecklenburg.

His friends declared Von Ossietzky was so broken in spirit that he may have agreed, in return for his freedom, to refuse the Nobel Peace Prize if it is formally offered to him.

It is known he has been denied a passport and cannot leave the country.

From the tenor of editorial remarks in the German press, it is evident the Nazi regime would consider such an award to Von Ossietzky as a grim joke, if not an insult to the new Germany.

Paris Minister, Target of Foes, Takes His Life

Roger Salengro Blames Act on Rightists in Note; Deputies Fight.

By the Associated Press.

Paris, Nov. 18.—Socialist Minister of the Interior Roger Salengro killed himself today after penning a note laying responsibility for his act on Rightists who charged he was a World War deserter.

His body was found in the gas-filled kitchen of his Lille home at almost the exact spot where his wife, Leone, died 18 months ago.

Salengro's note blamed political foes for causing his wife's death also and concluded with the simple statement that he was "now going to join Leone."

Death of the 46-year-old cabinet minister and one of Premier Leon Blum's most intimate friends shook political France.

Rightist deputies and Leftist newspapermen fought with fists in the corridors of the Chamber of Deputies.

A group belonging to a pacific organization shouted "coward!" at the Rightist Deputy Tixier-Vigancour, one of Salengro's main accusers in the matter of his war record. The Rightist Deputy Marcel Heraud joined Tixier-Vigancour in a brief scuffle with the others. Heraud was severely beaten.

Premier Blum hastened from Paris to Lille on receipt of the first news of Salengro's death there and wept openly as he read aloud the farewell note.

Wrote Salengro, twice acquitted of Rightist charges of being a wartime deserter:

"I ha struggled valiantly, but I have come to the end. If they (the Rightists) do not succeed in dishonoring me, at least they shall bear the responsibility for my death, for I am neither a deserter nor a traitor."

The note referred to the Rightists "deserter" charges of October 30, of which Salengro was acquitted by a military tribunal and by the Chamber of Deputies.

Even after the public exonerations, the Rightists did not cease their attacks on Salengro, and informed sources asserted new and secret charges were made against the interior minister at Tuesday's cabinet meeting.

While Blum mourned beside the body fo his friend, Leftist deputies said they feared "reprisals" would be made by their colleagues against the Rightists.

Feeling ran high in the chamber body of his friend, Leftist deputies said many of their followers demanded anti-Fascist demonstrations be held in Paris and Lille.

At Lille, Blum came out of Salengro's house and appealed to citizens to remain calm, as "it was not their duty" to avenge Salengro's death.

"You know who's guilty," the premier said, "but it is not your place to strike back at them."

Informed political observers predicted that Salengro would become a martyr, his death adding ammunition to the struggle between fascism and socialism-communism in France.

Judge Moffat Sued by Driver For Collateral

Return of $140 Is Sought From Hyattsville Justice of the Peace.

Justice of the Peace Herbert J. Moffat, Hyattsville, Md., who was openly criticized last week by Gov. Harry W. Nice for holding a Washington policeman under bond for arresting a Maryland resident on a speeding charge just across the District line, yesterday was named defendant in a suit for $140 filed by a Washington motorist.

Woodrow Brice, colored, 904 O street northwest, alleges that he paid Moffat $151.70, purportedly for collateral, on a charge of driving his automobile faster than 60 miles an hour through Mount Rainier, Md., last July 1.

An investigation of the police court records has shown that this same case was disposed of by forfeiture of $11.70 on a charge of exceeding 45 miles an hour.

Attorneys for the Keystone Automobile Club, who represent Brice, allege that Moffat is liable for the $140 difference between what he is alleged to have accepted from the defendant and what was eventually paid to the court treasury.

The suit is similar to one filed a month ago against Elmer Pumphrey, bondsman, of Suitland, Md. In both cases $140 is the amount being sued for and in both cases the charges are alleged to have been changed and a lower collateral forfeited in court.

Denies Speeding Charge.

In an affidavit submitted to the Keystone Automobile Club, Brice declares that he was driving 20 miles an hour through a 25-mile zone when he was arrested for exceeding 60 miles an hour.

The arresting officers, the affidavit alleges, were Warren E. Peake and Frank Bell, both of whom have since been suspended by the Prince Georges County commissioners pending the grand jury's special session to investigate the alleged police-bonding graft ring.

When arraigned before Magistrate Moffat, Brice claims he protested violently against the charge of exceeding 60 miles an hour. One of his companions, he said, offered to testify to the justice that the charge was unfounded. Whereupon, one of the arresting officers is alleged to have shouted:

"Get out of here before I kick you out."

Brice stated he was permitted to call his wife's employer, who arrived several hours later and brought $151.70 for collateral.

After his release, Brice said he was told to come back for trial on July 22. But when he returned, he said, Officer Peake told him it would be best not to go to court because he might lose his District permit. Brice said he left and heard no more from the case.

Keystone Automobile Club attorneys had planned last week to request Gov. Nice to dismiss Justice Moffat but their interview with the Governor was delayed by his trip to St. Louis, Mo. It will be held shortly after November 23, when the Governor returns.

Governor Criticizes Moffat.

At the same time last week, it was revealed that Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen had received a letter from Gov. Nice in reference to the arrest of Policeman W. D. Huskey, of Number 2 Precinct by a Prince Georges County policeman, who hailed the District officer before Moffat.

The attitude of the justice of the peace in insisting that the Washington officer put up bond, even after he had identified himself, was severely criticized by Nice. He said: "I will not tolerate such discourtesies on the part of my appointees. He deserves a reprimand."

Huskey had chased a speeder across the District line and was attempting to arrest him when both men were placed under arrest by county officers. The Washington policeman was charged with assault but the case was nolle prossed by States Attorney Alan Bowie when it came to trial.

States Attorney Bowie has announced that he will confer with Ogle Marbury, special prosecutor, and officials of the Keystone Automobile Club at Upper Marlboro today to make plans for assembling the evidence for the grand jury, which is expected to convene the first Monday in December.

Attorney Louis Lebowitz, of Mount Rainier, who is credited with starting the investigation, is also expected to be called into the conference today.

TODAY, THEY KNOW BETTER
AT THE ages of 45 to 50 all women undergo a physiological change. The symptoms of this change are Hot Flushes, Dizzy Spells, Headaches, "Nerves," Sweating, Chills, Depression and they last for months, even years. Not so many years ago women who consulted their doctors about these miserable symptoms were told to go home and not worry about them, for nothing could be done. Today, however, doctors know better. They know that these annoying symptoms are caused by the lack of or an insufficient supply of an important gland-regulating hormone in the system. And they know that when they replace this regulating hormone in the system the symptoms generally disappear.
Today you can get this identical hormone, together with other helpful ingredients, in Zo-ak Tablets (Orange Box) at any Unity Drug Store or any good chain drug store. And you can take them with confidence, for Zo-ak is the formula of a well-known New York physician. It contains no harmful drugs, no dope, no depressing sedatives. Try Zo-ak as directed on label. If it does not relieve you of the Hot Flushes, Dizzy Spells, "Nerves," Headaches, if it does not make you feel happier in mind and body you get your money back. Bank Employe Faces Charge Of $806 Theft

Dorsett Denies Embezzling Funds After Arrest by F. B. I. Agents.

Accused of embezzling Christmas savings funds from the American Security & Trust Co., William Newman Dorsett, head teller at the Central branch, Seventh street and Massachusetts avenue northwest, was arraigned yesterday before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage and held in bond of $1,500 following his arrest by agents of the Department of Justice.

According to an announcement of J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Dorsett accepted deposits on Christmas savings accounts totaling $806 and failed to file an accounting with the bank. The fraudulent manipulations, it was charged, covered nearly a years' period.

Agents, following a lengthy investigation, arrested Dorsett at the Central branch yesterday. He was taken before Commissioner Turnage and released in bond pending a further hearing at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow. He was charged with embezzlement and pleaded not guilty.

An employe of the bank for 19 years, Dorsett lives with his family at 1629 Columbia road northwest. Members of the family last night refused to discuss the arrest and bank officials could not be reached for comment.

Freight Train Derailed Strike Plot Is Blamed

Shreveport, La., Nov. 18 (AP).—The engine and six cars of a Louisiana & Arkansas Railway freight train were derailed today at Hartman's Spur, 10 miles north of Minden, La. No injuries resulted.

Railroad officials at headquarters here reported that the derailment was due to a "deliberately cocked switch."

The wreck was one of a series which the railroad laid to "agitators" during a strike of transportation workers which began September 19.

'Sit-Down' Strike Shuts Auto Plants

Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 18 (U.P.).—Operations at the Fisher body plant of General Motors and the Atlanta Chevrolet factory plant closed down today as 550 employes of the Fisher Co. sat down with folded arms near idle machines.

The "sit-down strike" of the Fisher employes, representing virtually the entire employe personnel of the body plant, paralyzed operation at the Chevrolet Co. for lack of body materials.

Approximately 700 men in the Chevrolet branch had to quit work when material ran out.

Convicted Murderer Leads Prison Break

Schumann-Heink Poor; Riches Spent on Others

Hollywood, Nov. 18 (AP).—Mme. Ernestine Schuman-Heink died comparatively poor, but happy in the knowledge the thousands of dollars she gave away brought joy to others.

Friends recalled today one of the great contralto's last observations as she looked at the flowers heaped in her bedroom:

"If they would only take the money they spend on this and do some good with it."

In her heydey she earned upwards of $135,000 a year, spending it lavishly on her family and above all on the World War veterans who regarded her as "mother."

Broker's Son Is Held For Jury in Thefts

Chicago, Nov. 18 (AP).—Russell Alsip Linn, 34, son of a Philadelphia broker, was held to the grand jury in bonds of $10,000 on each of three charges of robbery today after three holdup victims identified him in court.

George R. Linn, father of the accused man, and the latter's wife appeared with his prisoner at the hearing. The elder Linn declined comment.

Officers said Linn told them he turned to robbery because he was unable to support his wife and 4-year-old son.

FORD
advances into 1937 with the LOWEST PRICE IN YEARS and new operating economy

THE ADDITION of a new 60-horsepower engine to the Ford line for 1937 brings you a new, low price and gives you a choice of two V-type 8-cylinder engines. 85 horsepower for maximum performance. 60 horsepower for maximum economy.

In basic design, the new 60-horsepower V-8 engine is a replica of its famous older brother—the V-8 "85." But its reduced size and weight make possible a lighter car, with lower operating costs, and the lowest Ford price in years.

The 60-horsepower engine was originally developed for use in England and France, where fuel costs are high and fuel economy is vitally important. It has been proven there for two years with brilliant success. Now, brought to America, it creates an entirely new standard of modern motoring economy!

The "60" engine is built in exactly the same body size and wheelbase, to the same advanced design, with the same comfort and convenience as the "85." It has all the distinctive Ford features for 1937. And it delivers V-8 smoothness and quietness at speeds up to 70 miles an hour.

Two engine sizes—but only one car and one purpose—to give you more miles and more satisfaction for your money in 1937. We invite you to see this very modern car at the showrooms of the nearest Ford dealer.

FORD FEATURES FOR 1937
APPEARANCE—Distinctive modern design. Headlamps streamlined into fender aprons. Modern lid-type hood. Larger luggage space. Interiors entirely new. Slanting V-type windshield opens in all closed cars.
BRAKES—The Easy-Action Safety Brakes in the new Ford give you "the safety of steel from pedal to wheel." Cable and conduit control type. Self-energizing. About one-third less pedal pressure is required to stop the car.
BODY—All steel. Top, sides, floor and frame welded into a single steel unit of great protective strength. Safety Glass throughout at no extra charge.
COMFORT AND QUIET—A big, roomy car with extra space in the body, where you want it—not taken up by the engine under the hood. Comfort of the Ford Center-Poise Ride is increased by smoother spring-action with new pressure lubrication. New methods of mounting body and engine make this a quieter car.

A Multitude of Previews Cause Surge of Memories Of the Old Days of the War and Meager Facilities

Screening Pictures Then Was Problem Which Was Overcome for Such Notables as Thomas Alva Edison, Secretary Daniels, Louis B. Mayer and Others; Pictures No Longer Seem to "Burn Off the Screen," as Once They Did.

WITH screenings to right of them, screenings to left of them, ready to volley and thunder, the critical fraternity—or those local members of the craft who are able to revert a few decades—are constrained to marvel slightly at the changes that have come over this undertaking of previewing pictures.

BELL.

In the old days it was a pretty doubtful business. If you saw a film in advance of its scheduled public showing you were, so to speak, among the anointed.

There was, for example, the abandoned coal cellar that Tom Moore had converted into a "private projection room," down on the basement floor of the Strand Theater at Ninth and D streets. That was long before the Rialto, Metropolitan or Palace Theaters had been opened. The firetrap had no outlet beyond the iron door by which you entered and was stuffy no end. Nevertheless, we used to look at films there and were glad of the opportunity.

I recall one day when Charlie Plunkett, now chief projectionist, I believe, at Loew's Capitol, was running off a Mary Garden subject—it might have been "Salome"—the print jammed in the "head" of the projection machine and burned off the screen. Charlie, with rare presence of mind and daring, yanked a few precious yards of celluloid out of the machine, stamped it out on the floor and probably averted what might have been a major catastrophe.

When the Rialto was opened, there was provided a projection room of more ample proportions, but still without adequate outlets to fresh air and ventilation. The first of the spacious, sky-lighted and altogether comfortable projection rooms came along with Crandall's Metropolitan, where, on the third floor, there was a commodious miniature theater in which we have screened as many as 25 or 30 reels of film in a single day.

Nowadays, you hear only of preview screenings in the private projection room of the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange, or of the Warner Brothers' local organization on the sixth floor of the Earle Theater Building—unless some management chooses to run off a picture after the regular running time of the billed attraction in a full-fledged theater. This either throws the thing into the midnight hours, or at about bedtime, at 10 a. m.

It is a tribute to the skill of the mechanicians who preside over the projection booths of the picture houses that no films have "burned off the screen" before these eyes for many years.

The perfection of the projection machines has something to do with it, as goes without saying, but there still was a time when it was not an unexpected circumstance of picture presentation that a couple of reels of film might burn up at almost any time, if the celluloid stuck in the shutter and the intense light necessary to project it clearly set it afire. It was as instantaneous a matter as the flame that springs from an hour-glass properly focused in the rays of the sun.

• • • •

These extraneous remarks have been occasioned by the fact that there are preview screenings booked for every night from Sunday through next Wednesday or Thursday. Matty Radin, managing director of the Belasco Theater and the chain of theaters of which it forms a part, is coming to town next Monday to screen a picture at 4:30 p. m., following a Warner screening at 1:30, after which dinner is to be served at the Carlton. On Sunday night the Loew interests are running off a strip of gelatin, and so it goes. It's a gay life, if you don't weekend.

• • • •

The retrospective remarks that already have been set down relative to the matter of previews call back to mind, too, the distinguished personalities who used to enjoy availing themselves of any sort of opportunity to see their products away from the public gaze.

There was the late Thomas A. Edison, for instance, who conspired with the War and Navy Departments during the Great War to contrive some method of combatting submarine warfare effectively. He used to bring films of the Chesapeake Bay maneuvers down into that dingy room in the basement of the Strand and look at them there, in company with Secretary Daniels and others of the Wilson Cabinet.

Then there was Louis B. Mayer, production chief of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who dropped into the Metropolitan projection room one day and wanted to look at a brief footage in natural color of a Mae Murray sequence in "The Merry Widow." Color was a novelty in those days. Mae at that time still was married to Robert Z. Leonard, the celebrated director, and was in the first flight of box-office stars.

It was on this visit that Lou Mayer confided to your reporter why some of his directors were so highly paid and why others were merely "carried along."

It was then, too, that he expressed himself unequivocally to the effect that the late Irving Thalberg was the one authentic genius of production on the West Coast—that he had a quicker and surer perception of screen values than any other producer in pictures. That has been proved to have been true.

If you insist upon particularization, it was made plain that L. Monta Bell, former Washington newspaperman, was valuable on the production end because he could make five pictures while other directors were making only three. That pace was maintained over a period of years and made vast profits for M-G-M, discovering, as it did, Norma Shearer, later to become Mrs. Irving Thalberg; Adolphe Menjou and a good many others who have since reached the heights.

Supports Arnold in His Best

When Samuel Goldwyn's screen version of Edna Ferber's story of "Come and Get It" is revealed on the screen at Loew's Palace Theater today, Frances Farmer, pictured above, will be disclosed, along with Edward Arnold, in the best performance she has contributed to the silver sheet. The picture takes rank among the best of the year.

THE POST'S New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons.

WHEN Amelia Earhart Putnam was about to make her solo hop across the Atlantic, she suddenly remembered—at the airport—that she was taking no money with her. Just before the take-off she turned to her anxious husband and asked him for some money to take across. The publisher extracted a wad of bills and peeled off—a $20 bill . . . When the aviatrix returned, she still had that bill. It was framed, and placed on the wall of her study . . . When she was in California later, about to set off for her flight across the Pacific, Mrs. Putnam remembered that she had forgotten to take that $20 bill. She phoned New York and requested that it be air-mailed to her immediately . . . The bill, frame and all, was sent pursuant to instructions.

The plane which carried that mail crashed, and all the cargo was burned—all except the bill . . . With edges burned brown, it now adorns the study of the Putnam home . . .

PRENTISS M. BROWN was elected Michigan's Senator this month. Shortly before the election his family was quarantined because of scarlet fever . . . As soon as the tabulators announced that Brown was elected, the Senator immediately was surrounded by the usual job-seekers and swamped with fantastic schemes of legislation . . . He decided to get away from it all, and accomplished this remarkable—for a Senator-elect—feat by walking right back into his own house . . . where the quarantine won't be lifted for another month.

BOAKE CARTER is the first radio performer to be picketed. Some members of the striking Maritime Union decided that Carter's talks were not favorable to them and sent two men for picket duty in front of the radio station from which he broadcasts . . .

A DAWN PATROL columnist, who has been appearing in vaudeville, recently reported that Dewey's next investigation will be directed at the Musicians' Union, in connection with the picket. Jack Rosenberg, official of that union, wrote to Dewey, who replied that the report was untrue. As a result, the Musicians' Union is placing the Dawn Patroller on the unfair list—which means the calling out of all musicians employed in any vaudeville theater which books him . . . Nelson Eddy sang "The Vagabond Song" on his Sunday broadcast. Censors made him change the line "To hell with Burgundy" to "Away with Burgundy."

THE GOOD WILL COURT won't stand for any kidding by other programs and won't grant its permission . . . Every time a world-renowned violinist gives a concert here, a rival fiddler gives a dinner party at the same hour and demands that their mutual friends come early.

"WIVES NEVER KNOW." Paramount picturization of a story by Keene Thompson, with screen play by Frederick Hazlett Brennan, featuring Charlie Ruggles and Mary Boland, supported by Adolphe Menjou, Vivienne Osborne, Claude Gillingwater, Fay Holden, Louise Beaver, Norma Lee, Constance Bergen, Don Rowen, Arthur Housman, Irving Bacon, Parnell Pratt, Alice Ardell and Edward Gargan. Directed by Elliott Nugent. Previewed Tuesday midnight by W. A. Whitney.

When Charlie Ruggles and Mary Boland get together in one of their famed man-and-wife yarns, just sit right back—if you can, while watching their antics—and enjoy yourself. "Wives Never Know" is a prime incentive to this comfortable procedure.

Here we have Mr. Ruggles, the sedate proprietor of a nursery, comfortably and happily married these 18 or 20 years to Miss Boland. Enter Adolph Menjou, as the dyspeptic cynic who describes marriage as the "living death." He convinces Miss Boland that she is missing the supreme satisfaction of any wife by having a too devoted husband and that if Charlie would sow a wild oat or two she really would live in the extreme satisfaction coming from forgiving him.

Well, Charlie picks out one Renee LaTour, actress, and proceeds to do as advised. There is no need to go further into the narrative details of the story. No matter how familiar the yarn, with Mr. Ruggles and Miss Boland, supported by Vivienne Osborne, as the actress (who really turns out to be Mr. Menjou's heart interest), Claude Gillingwater, Louise Beaver and a flock of others, it is all a matter of seeing and hearing—and believe you me, you will not be disappointed.

Two diverting Technicolor short subjects, as well as the combined releases of the Paramount and Universal newsreels, are included in the program.

In HOLLYWOOD With Jimmy Fiddler

Settin' Around.

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 19.

In step with the times (new deals, new political parties, new taxes), the new owners of Universal studio call their company "The New Universal." The lot is peopled with new faces, especially among the general employes. When Carl Laemmle was president of the company, his kinfolk populated the place. Now all those aunts and uncles and nieces and nephews and cousins have been fired.

FRED ASTAIRE.

The only picture in work today is "Top of the Town," this studio's first contribution to the cycle of musical comedies. It is being produced by Lou Brock, the real discoverer of Fred Astaire, whose first screen tests were shelved with the notation: Not good photographically.

Brock persuaded his RKO employers to bring Astaire to the West Coast for a part in "Flying Down to Rio." His bosses did this but stipulated, "The guy is a hoofer, and we want to see little else of him." But Brock perceived what his employers had overlooked, that Astaire had a whimsical screen personality when studio officials finally saw the incompletely assembled picture they were all for shelving it, but Brock fast-talked them into giving his production a local preview. The rest is history, except this funny tag: In one breath Brock's bosses admitted he was right about Fred—next breath they discharged him!

One member of the "Top of the Town" cast is Verna Leslie. If you see the picture, her face (but not her name) may seem familiar. Your guess will be correct; she is, or was, Frances Grant, who played the ingenue lead with Will Rogers in "Doubting Thomas." Her career was moving along swiftly after the Rogers picture, when suddenly it stopped short; she could get no more jobs. There was no apparent reason; the same thing often happens in this explanationless town.

Broke but undiscouraged, she took a temporary position as cashier in a drug store. Such pluck deserves reward, and Universal is giving Verna Leslie, nee Frances Grant, a new opportunity.

In the Vendome Cafe the other noon Cary Grant espied a man of familiar face. They greeted each other, and Cary suddenly remembered where they had met before. The customs inspector who had held him for an hour at Southampton, and had threatened to fine him for underdeclaration! The fellow was sheepish, but game. He asked Grant to help him get a break in the movies. Here was a great chance for an actor to have the last laugh, but Cary is not that sort of guy. He got the man a job in his current picture.

LAST DAY ADVENTURE IN MANHATTAN and TED LEWIS REVUE

Theater Week Notable for a Premiere Play

Katharine Cornell in New Anderson Play at the National Tuesday.

The advance mail order sale for Katharine Cornell's five-day engagement at the National Theater in Maxwell Anderson's "The Wingless Victory," beginning next Tuesday night, indicates another record-breaking week for the actress-manageress in Washington. It is interesting to know that habitual playgoers are coming to the National Capital from Boston, New York, Buffalo, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Richmond and other cities for Tuesday night's premiere. The fact still remains, however, that there are still desirable seats to be had at the box office. The theater will be closed on Sunday and Monday night in order to permit Miss Cornell—as is her custom—to perfect her play upon the stage where it will be performed for the first time. "The Wingless Victory" is being directed by Guthrie McClintic, with settings by Joe Mielziner, and enlists the services of an admirable supporting cast, led by Walter Abel.

Samuel Goldwyn's picturization for United Artists release of Edna Ferber's story of "Come and Get it," a novel dealing with the big timber business, is being shown for the first time in Washington on the screen of Loew's Palace Theater, beginning today, with Edward Arnold in the stellar role, supported, in two fine performances, by Frances Farmer and Walter Brennan. The story is the somewhat amazing one of father and son both in love with the same girl under circumstances that are slightly bizarre. A new Mickey Mouse cartoon comedy, in which Donald Duck has his inning, the new "News of the Day" and added short subjects will complete the bill.

Frank McHugh and Joan Blondell are the foremost members of the cast recruited for the screen interpretation of Alex Yokel's fabulous stage comedy of "Three Men on a Horse," which is to be shown for the first time on the screen at the Earle beginning tomorrow. This is a comedy of such substantial fiber and such noble repute that there seems to be no need here to go into the details of plot. Sam Levine, of the original cast, will be on hand to lend his high-pressure performance to the role of the horse player who perceived a quick road to riches in the person of the little postcard writer. The vaudeville portion of the bill will be headlined by Niela Goodelle, borrowed from the airwaves.

• • • •

The Dionne quintuplets, supported by Jean Hersholt, Dorothy Peterson, "Slim" Summerville and numerous other members of the original cast of "The Country Doctor," are the pictured stars of "Reunion," to be screened for the first time locally at Loew's Capitol Theater for the week beginning tomorrow. "Reunion," of course, is a sequel to "The Country Doctor" in which the five Dionnes are shown in their third year, instead of their first. The stage bill at the Capitol will be headlined by Johnny Perkins, who returns to help Art Brown conduct his community songfests and otherwise master ceremonies over a week that will feature Glen Carow, pianist; De Roza, master of magic; Charles Withers and others of note.

pacity business at the Belasco Theater. The cast is foreign, to be sure, but the subtleties of the story are such as to appeal to any sophisticated audience.

• • • •

Jane Wyatt and Louis Hayward are the pictured costars of "The Luckiest Girl in the World," which comes to the screen at RKO-Keith's tomorrow. The story first came to public attention in a popular magazine under the title of "Kitchen Privileges." It was written by Anne Jordan. It concerns a young woman who can neither cook nor sew, but who gets her man, nevertheless. The bill will be augmented by the usual short-reel subjects and a new issue of the Pathe News. Foremost among the short-reels will be a song-subject by the Hall Johnson Choir, celebrated for their work in "The Green Pastures."

• • • •

"Pigskin Parade," the riotous football comedy, in which the principal roles are played by Jack Haley, Patsy Kelly, Stuart Erwin, Arline Judge and the Yacht Club Boys, will occupy the screen at Loew's Columbia Theater for the week beginning today. There is a wealth of fun in this subject and a coherent story that possesses a new comedy angle that is good for a million laughs.

• • • •

"The Scoundrel," the only motion picture in which Noel Coward ever appeared, is the current attraction at the Rialto Theater. It is a Ben Hecht-Charlie MacArthur production, which is guarantee enough that it is out of the beaten track.

• • • •

"Bill of Divorcement," Clemence Dane's play in which Katharine Hepburn achieved her first success in support of John Barrymore and Billie Burke, opens a week's engagement at the Little Theater today. The tragic story is one that well bears revival as an example of the cinema's finest attainment. The play originally was played on the stage by Katharine Cornell, who is about to open a new play in the Capital.

For Thanksgiving week at the Gayety, beginning with the customary Sunday matinee, Col. James J. Lake announces the engagement of Al Golden's "Merrymakers," a new Independent Burlesque Association production. The featured feminine star will be Diana Logan. Miss Logan, heralded as a raving beauty, who doesn't care who finds it out, has never before been seen in the Capital.

Civic Theater

"KIND LADY." The Washington Civic Theater presents the drama in a prologue, three acts, four scenes and epilogue, adapted by Edward Chodorov from a short story by Hugh Walpole. Staged by Day Tuttle, with setting designed by William Girvan. At the Wardman Park Theater, November 18, 19, 20 and 21. Reviewed Wednesday evening by W. A. Whitney.

THE CAST.

Mr. Foster	Ted Tenley
Mary Herries	Lucy Howard
Lucy Weston	Eileen Fowler
Rose	Sylvia Lane
Phyllis Glenning	Virginia Rand
Peter Sanford	Edward C. Stevlingson
Henry Abbott	Richard Kreuzburg
Ada	Irene Kaye Schmidt
The Doctor	Herbert Leuchter
Mr. Edwards	Milton Freedman
Mrs. Edwards	Alice Tams Ruffner
Aggie Edwards	Phyllis Warner
Gustav Rosenberg	Arthur Westover

Happy is every respect as was the selection of its opening production last month, the Washington Civic Theater last evening was not so fortunate in its second choice, "Kind Lady."

While the players read their lines with precision, limned the 13 parts with better than average ability, and moved about within the limits of the possibilities of the script, "Kind Lady" fell considerably short of being a play of intense human drama or of profound phychology.

Briefly, the story is that of a kind-hearted spinster who befriends what seems to be a human derelict but who, through some unrevealed power induces in her a hypnagogic state so that he is able to turn to his own ends valuable art treasures. There is an indication of a post-curtain retributive justice, but, as the drama stands, it is two hours of "situation" that seems to progress but little and that little slowly.

Cast Does Well.

As the machinator, with the face of a Greek god and the oily tongue and manner of a Mephistopheles, Richard Kreuzburg tops his fellow players in histrionic excellence. He is everything he should be. Lucy Howard is the harassed kind lady, with her most brilliant work her exquisite reading of the tag line. Others in the forefront of the cast are Milton Freedman and Alice Tams Ruffner.

Ted Tenley, Eileen Fowler, Sylvia Lane (as the maid, she had one nice emotional scene), Edward C. Stevlingson, Irene Kaye Schmidt (demented to a degree), Herbert Leuchter, Phyllis Warner and Arthur Westover had supporting parts of varying lengths.

What deficiencies of "theater" were manifest last evening were predominently the playwright's errors of omission and commission, for cast and director did truly commendable work.

To Alkalize Acid Indigestion Away Fast

PEOPLE EVERYWHERE ARE ADOPTING THIS REMARKABLE "PHILLIPS" WAY

SIGNS WHICH OFTEN INDICATE "ACID STOMACH" PAIN AFTER EATING
FEELING OF WEAKNESS
INDIGESTION
NAUSEA
MOUTH ACIDITY
LOSS OF APPETITE
SOUR STOMACH
FREQUENT HEADACHES

On all sides, people are learning that the way to gain almost incredibly quick relief, from stomach conditions arising from over-acidity, is to alkalize the stomach with Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

You take either two teaspoons of the liquid Phillips' after meals; or two Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets. Almost instantly "acid indigestion" goes, gas from hyper-acidity, "acid-headaches"—from over-indulgence in food or smoking—and nausea are relieved. You feel made over; forget you have a stomach.

Try this Phillips' way if you have any acid stomach upsets. And try it particularly, for quick relief, if you are using a less natural or less effective alkalizer. Get either the liquid "Phillips'" or the remarkable, new Phillips' Milk of Magnesia Tablets. Each tablet equals a teaspoon of the liquid form. Only 25¢ for a big box at drug stores.

ALSO IN TABLET FORM: Each tiny tablet is the equivalent of a teaspoonful of genuine Phillips' Milk of Magnesia.

Gen. Russell, Wife Guests At Farewell

Marine Corps. Officers Give Dinner to Retiring Commandant.

Holcombs Attend Fete With Other Ranking Members of Staff.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Maj. Gen. John R. Russell, retiring commandant of the United States Marine Corps, with Mrs. Russell, was honored last night at a farewell dinner by officers of the corps. More than 150 officers stationed in and near Washington attended the function in the Shoreham Hotel.

Among the guests were Brig. Gen. Thomas Holcomb, who will succeed Gen. Russell on his retirement November 30, with Mrs. Holcomb. They were seated at the table with Gen. and Mrs. Russell. The latter wore a gown of blue brocade and a corsage of orchids. Mrs. Holcomb was in a gown of red chiffon with a short train.

Also at their table were Col. and Mrs. Seth Williams, Col. James Meade, who will attain the rank of brigadier general on Gen. Russell's retirement; Mrs. Meade and Col. and Mrs. William T. Upshur.

Maj. Gen. McCafty Little and Mrs. Little had at their table Col. and Mrs. Charles Sanderson, Col. and Mrs. Russell Putnam, Col. and Mrs. Frederick A. Barker and Col. and Mrs. Clayton Vogel.

Mrs. Little wore a gown of powder blue brocade made with a long full skirt and jacket with wide revers, a long jewel necklace and a jeweled ornament in her hair. With Brig. Gen. Hugh Matthews and Mrs. Matthews were Col. and Mrs. Ross E. Rowell. Mrs. Rowell in an artistic gown of white satin made with a low square cut in back; Col. and Mrs. John Marston, Col. and Mrs. Julian Smith, Mrs. Smith in black velvet and wearing a corsage of gardenias and lilies of the valley, and Col. and Mrs. Leander A. Clapp. Mrs. Matthews' gown was a becoming black velvet cut low in back and with a red facing at the decolletage in front. The long full skirt was banded in red at the hem.

Mrs. Williams, wife of Brig. Gen. Richard P. Williams, wore dubonnet lace with a velvet evening wrap of the same shade. At the table with her and Gen. Williams were Col. and Mrs. Calvin Matthews, Col. and Mrs. Thomas H. Clarke, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Francis T. Evans, Mrs. Evans wearing a quint gray satin gown smocked at the girdle; Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Henry Larson.

Brig. Gen. John Beaumont had at his table Mrs. Robert H. Dunlap, widow of Brig. Gen. Dunlap, who wore a gown of black velvet; Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Kellar Rockey, Lieut. Col. Matthew Kingman, Mrs. Bryington, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Alphonse DeCarre and Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Samuel L. Howard.

Brig. Gen. Harold C. Reisinger had at his table Lieut. Col. and Mrs. A. F. Howard, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. R. R. Wright, Lieut Col. and Mrs. William G. Hawthorne, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Sheard and Maj. Best.

The guests gathered in the lobby and there were many greetings among officers and their wives who have known each other at distant stations and had not met since coming to Washington.

Helen Dowty Is Wed To Robert Jackson

The Church of the Covenant was the scene of the wedding at 10:30 a. m. Tuesday of Miss Helen Dowty, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sam S. Dowty, of San Angelo, Tex., to Mr. Robert M. Jackson, of Marlin, Tex. The Rev. Albert McCartney officiated.

The bride wore a black velvet gown trimmed with venise lace, a black off-the-face hat and a corsage of gardenias and lilies of the valley. Her only attendant was Mrs. Karl Standish, of Washington. Mr. George W. Stimpson, president of the Press Club, served as best man.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Jackson left for Baltimore, where they boarded the boat for Florida. After a two weeks' wedding trip, they will reside in Washington. The bridegroom is secretary to Senator Tom Connally, of Texas.

Tea Is Planned Today For Gertrude Lawrence

Miss Gertude Lawrence will be guest of honor at a tea today from 4 to 6 in the English Speaking Union, 1107 Sixteenth street.

Hostesses will be Lady Lewis, Mrs. J. Dudley Morgan, Mrs. Alonzo Tyner, Mrs. Wrisley Brown, Mrs. Seth Williams, and Mrs. Albert Allen Jones.

Bow Is Made to Society By Miss Margot Garrett

Underwood & Underwood.

MISS MARGO GARRETT and MRS. GEORGE ANGUS GARRETT.

Lovely Debutante Present at Tea Given in Home of Parents. Dance Planned in Her Honor Saturday, Nov. 28.

Miss Margot Garrett, daughter of Mr. George Angus Garrett and one of the Capital's loveliest debutantes this season, was presented to society yesterday afternoon at the first of two functions at which she will make her bow, a tea given by Mr. and Mrs. Garrett at their home on New Hampshire avenue.

She received with her stepmother in the drawing room, where bouquets of pink roses predominated in the decorations. Mrs. Garrett wore a gown of purple velvet trimmed in robin's-egg blue and the debutante was in a gown of powder blue and carried an old-fashioned bouquet of roses and forget-me-nots.

Debutantes of this season who received with them included Miss Bettina Belmont, who will be presented at a dance at the North Wales Club during the Christmas holidays; Miss Carlile Porter, who is making her Washington debut on Friday, and Miss Ethel Worthington, who is to be presented at a dance at the Sulgrave Club on December 22.

Other young friends assisting in receiving were Miss Susan Mary Jay, Miss Emily Davis, Miss Marguerite Hagner, Miss Angelica Lloyd, Miss Julie Dell Zimmermann, Miss Eleanor Roosevelt and Miss Nancy Leiter.

In the dining room, where the guests were served, were great bouquets of cream and white chrysanthemums. Friends of Mrs. Garrett who poured were Lady Lewis, Mrs. F. Lamont Belin, Mrs. John Wilkins, Mrs. Wallach Merriam, Mrs. Myron Hofer, Mrs. Fleming Newbold and Mrs. James Clement Dunn.

Mrs. Garrett's mother, Mrs. Peter Shields, of Philadelphia, also was here for the occasion.

The second party for the debutante will be a dance, set for Saturday night after Thanksgiving at the Sulgrave Club. It will be one of the important social events of Thanksgiving week and will be attended by many out-of-town guests as well as members of Capital society.

Mrs. James McKane Gives Luncheon For Her Daughter

Mrs. James P. McKane entertained at a luncheon yesterday at the Mayflower for her daughter, Miss Catherine McKane, a debutante of last season.

Among the guests, who included several who will make their bow this season, were Miss Beverly Moffett, Miss Mary Senate Howes, Miss Hebe Reynolds, Miss Virginia Randolph, Miss Henrietta Talbott, Miss Getrude Pearson, Miss Mary Crane, Miss Kearsley Caldwell, Miss Carrie Roper Fulton, Miss Martha Talley, Miss Mary Agnes Young, Miss Virginia Palmer, Miss Mary Patterson, Miss Nancy Wright, Miss Laura Johnson and Mrs. George Bellacovitch.

Mrs. R. E. Lee 3d Will Have Holiday Week-End Guests

Mrs. Robert E. Lee 3d will have as her guests for the Thanksgiving week-end, Mr. and Mrs. Francis I. du Pont and their daughter, Miss Delphine du Pont, of Wilmington, Del., and Count de Blackmere, of New York City.

Miss du Pont, a cousin of Miss Ethel du Pont, whose engagement to Mr. Franklin Delano Roosevelt, jr., was recently announced, will stand in the receiving line at the Black and White ball on Friday evening, November 27, at the Mayflower.

Mrs. du Pont, the former Miss Anna Rhett, of Charleston, S. C., is Mrs. Lee's cousin.

Castellanes To Be Feted At Functions

Washington Parties Will Be Given to Count, Countess During Visit.

Tuckermans to Be Hosts at Affair to Be Held in Bethesda Home.

Several parties are being planned in honor of Count and Countess Bohdan de Castellane of Villa Pamela, Menton, France, who are arriving later in the week to visit Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman at their home in Bethesda. The Countess is a sister of Mrs. Tuckerman and made her debut in Washington. Among her children by a previous marriage are Miss Helen De Peyster, of New York, and Mrs. James Todd, of Long Island, who frequently visits at Tuxeden, the Tuckerman estate.

The count, a distant cousin of the late Boni de Castellane, who married Anna Gould, is the author of an autobiography called, like Mrs. Longworth's, "Crowded Hours." He and Countess de Castellane are at present visiting in New York.

Their distinguished countrywoman, Countess Andre de Fels, sailed yesterday on the Normandie to return to her home in France. Sometimes called the "modern Mme. Recamier" because of the brilliant salon she maintains in Paris, the Countess is the author of several books, one on the life of Monet. She has been the guest of Mrs. Sheldon Whitehouse in New York since leaving the Capital, where she was entertained at a luncheon given earlier in the week at the French Embassy by Mme. de Laboulaye.

Among the many out-of-town guests coming to Washington for the dance to be given next Saturday by Mr. and Mrs. George Angus Garrett for their daughter, Miss Margot Garrett, are Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Jefferson Coolidge, of Boston. They will arrive on Friday to be the guests of Rear Admiral and Mrs. Cary T. Grayson, who will entertain ta a small dinner in their honor before the ball.

Watson-Liggett Wedding Is Set

Rear Admiral and Mrs. Adolphus E. Watson have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Priscilla Winslow Watson, to Mr. Alexander Coventry Liggett, of Washington. The ceremony will take place on Wednesday, December 9, at the Sulgrave Club, in the presence of members of the two families and close friends and will be followed by a reception.

Miss Watson has chosen as her matron of honor Mrs. R. Ambler Liggett, of Tampa, Fla. Bridesmaids will be Miss Laura Bell, of Savannah, Ga., and the Misses Elizabeth Lister, Katherine DuBois and Anne Totten, of Washington. Mr. R. Ambler Liggett will serve as his brother's best man, and the ushers will be Mr. Richard L. Sexton and Mr. Edward T. Stuart, of Philadelphia; Mr. John H. Henshaw, of New York, and Mr. Richard Griffin, Mr. Harry D. Mitchell and Mr. John Archibold, of Washington.

Miss Esther Jamieson Wed to Mr. Stevenson

At a quiet ceremony at the home of her mother, Mrs. Annie J. Degges, Miss Esther M. Jamieson was married Tuesday to Mr. Richard B. Stevenson. The Rev. R. S. Wood, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Petworth, performed the ceremony.

Immediately after the wedding Mr. Stevenson and his bride left for a trip in the West. On their return, December 1, they will reside at 5200 Third street. Mr. Stevenson, originally from Indianapolis, Ind., now holds a position in the Department of Agriculture.

THE MERRY WHIRL by MARYLYN

The Rumanian Minister, Mr. Charles A. Davila, was among the guests of honor at a dinner given in New York the other evening by the country's most famed party giver, Miss Elsa Maxwell. Later Miss Maxwell took her guests to the theater.

The Minister is almost as noted as a host in Washington as Miss Maxwell is celebrated as a hostess on two continents, although his parties differ from hers in that they are much more conservative.

Where Miss Maxwell concentrates on antics, such as scavenger hunts (which she originated), by the way), Mr. Davila depends for the success of his dinners largely on his ability to make each guest feel his or her presence is absolutely necessary to insure a gay evening.

On her recent return from Europe, Miss Maxwell confided to breathless reporters her recipe for brilliant entertaining, the first rule of which, she said, is never to invite anyone because of obligations. Evidently Miss Maxwell has decided to abandon her scheme, announced last spring when she left for Europe of returning to the simple life and turning her penthouse apartment in the Waldorf-Astoria Towers into a farmyard, replete with imported soil and everything.

Mme. Dimitriu, wife of the Assistant Financial Counselor of the Rumanian Legation, who has been ill with a cold for the last week, ventured out yesterday to fill an engagement to speak before the League of Republican Women. Mme. Dimitriu is a Washingtonian, has not yet been to her husband's homeland and her knowledge of the Rumanian language is limited to a little nursery rhyme she occasionally repeats for the amusement of friends, but she probably knows more of the history and customs of the country than do many Rumanians. She has studied so much about Rumania and especially the part of women in its affairs, that she feels as though she had lived there and she presents her subject when talking on the women of Rumania as though she were really one of them.

An informal "until snow falls" tennis club exists in Washington. There are no rules or officers, merely a group of several diehards who refuse to cease playing their favorite game of tennis no matter how cold the weather. Members of the group which meets to play on Sunday include Mr. William Turner, of the State Department, Lieut. Comdr. Wells Roberts, Miss Dorothy Cassard and Miss Florence Harris.

Undiscouraged by the outcome of the election, Mrs. Virginia White Speel, Republican National Committeewomen from the District, still wears both her rhinestone elephant and a sunflower of brilliants pinned to her dress. Furthermore, she has in her apartment a collection of miniature elephants which even surpasses in number that of Mrs. Borah, wife of Senator Borah.

Among the two hundred-odd elephants in Mrs. Speel's collection is one carved of ivory which her son had made for her in Switzerland.

Society Notes

The Ambassador of Ecuador, Senor Capitan Colon Eloy Alfaro, left for New York City yesterday and will return to Washington tomorrow. The sons of the Ambassador and Mme. Alfaro, Cadet Eloy Alfaro and Cadet Jaime Alfaro, will spend Christmas with their parents at the Mayflower.

Representative Kent E. Keller, of Ava, Ill., is a guest at the Dodge during a stay in Washington.

Representative and Mrs. Alfred L. Bulwinkle, of Gastonia, N. C., are at the Wardman Park and Representative and Mrs. Frank Hancock, of Oxford, N. C., at the Raleigh.

Col. Jonathan N. Wainwright, commandant at Fort Myer, and Mrs. Wainwright, will entertain at a small dinner tomorrow evening preceding the monthly dance at the post headquarters building.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell E. Sard, of Washington, are at the Ambassador Hotel in New York City, where they will spend [illegible] days.

Roberts to Return To Capital Soon.

Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., who have been in New York for several months, will soon return to their apartment at the Mayflower to spend the winter.

Mlle. Lea Bouligny will hold her annual hunt breakfast on Thanksgiving Day at the Warrenton Country School in Warrenton. Following the breakfast there will be a formal opening of the school's new art building. The work of Miss Joan Esley, Mr. Joseph Whitla Stinson, Mr. Clarke Daniel, Mr. Charles Waddy Wood and Miss Virginia Farrar, Mr. Murray Black, Mr. Wood will be among those exhibited.

Miss Hamilton Entertains.

Miss Dorothy Hamilton entertained at a supper party recently in the patio of the Carlton in honor of Miss Henrietta Talbott, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Benjamin Talbott, and a debutante of the season.

Miss Anne Powell Randolph, who spent part of the summer in Newport, is visiting there with Mr. and Mrs. Thomas I. Hare for a few days before returning to Washington.

Kentucky Society Sets Meeting Dates

The dates for six meetings of the Kentucky Society of Washington during its 1936-37 season have been announced by its president, Mr. Lorenzo Martin.

All will be held in the main ballroom of the Willard Hotel and will begin at 9 o'clock in the evening. The opening meeting will be November 27. Dates of the other meetings are December 22, January 26, February 23, March 30, and April 30.

Mr. A. O. Stanley, jr., Mrs. R. E. Adams and Mrs. Hamilton Alexander are the vice presidents of the society for the current season. Other officers are: Mrs. Albert J. Kraemer, secretary; Mr. G. B. Likens, treasurer; Mr. A. H. Tackett, financial secretary, and Miss Olive Dean assistant financial secretary.

A Woman's NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

The show season is in full cry, and I am just as apt to wander into the wrong auditorium and ask for a stream-lined 1937 model of "Gone With the Wind" or expect to behold a five-gaited "land - cruiser," as some of our hoity-toity friends refer to the ubiquitous trailer.

ALICE HUGHES.

The horse show had no sooner sent its glossy beauties back to their plush-lined stalls than the local version of the automobile show broke out with unbridled violence. Thirty-five thousand people fought their way in to grow envious on opening day, the President wrote a letter saying he thought the idea very nice, and the general pushing, gaping time was had by all. I much prefer the "food-show" of my childhood, for it passed out samples. But I'm merely captious.

Closely inspecting the 1937 motors, I find them both new and shiny. They are much gayer in color than in recent years—upturn or something, I suppose—with many running to blue, maroon and even canary yellow. I also not that provision is often made for as many as two radios, which is positively two too many for my money. Seats of chair height are now quite the thing for which I am sure we all vote, and there may be some comfort in the thought that all windows are now constructed of unbreakable glass.

I found most restless Americans milling around the trailer exhibits, and the doors had hardly been opened before an elegant lady named the Marquise Agnes de Rizzo had laid $7,000 on the line for one of the fanciest of them. That will give you an idea of the way the trailer thing has caught on, even in rural Gotham.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN.—Another show in progress here has been the annual "Book Fair," where authors—real, live writers—mingle with the rest of us, smoking smelly old pipes and trying to look unconscious—some very successfully, too. We can also peer at priceless manuscripts under glass, though we cannot solicit autographs, and who wants an author's autograph when we can get Robert Taylor's.

The seismograph at Fordham University failed to jiggle even faintly when the town received word from London, by the freighter, that Peggy Upton Hopkins Joyce Morner intended to take, as her fifth, a 30-year-old Britisher named Vivian Jackson. Broadway and Park avenue received the news with astounding calm, and there was no break in the market. Yet we all wish Peg well, and may her emeralds never grow less.

Our visiting colony of movie stars has just lost this little girl Olivia de Havilland, who made a big film start in "A Midsummer Night's Dream," that Shakespearean error of a season or so back. Contemplating these pretty screen juveniles, I always wonder how and why. They are lovely little creatures, but I'm sure we know their equals right down the block—any block.

An excellent example of "the new Russian woman" lies, just now, on a hospital cot in nearby Jersey City and gives off sailor language in her native tongue. She's blonde, 25-year-old Galina Gradskaja, second mate of the Soviet freighter Chelyuskinets, who fell 30 feet into the hold, broke her pelvic bone, and is good and sore about it. She's one of four women in the crew, including the doctor. Russians tell me her vocabulary is thrilling, even for a sailor.

Pleasant HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THEY LIVE in a little old white clapboard colonial house, that's as prim as a pinafore and charmingly complete from the grandfather's clock in the front hall to the grandfather himself in his rocking chair.

Right now they're repapering and puzzled about what to select . . . they've had a scenic paper in cream and beige tones for the living room but would like something different.

The woodwork is white and so are the curtains, which are full and white and ruffled. The furniture is mahogany of Federal design, and the rug is blue-green. The sofa is in a deep fine apricot color, and there is one wing chair in a figured material with a good deal of green in it. Two other upholstered chairs need new covers and there will be new lamps and maybe a new mirror and some pictures for the walls. "What would we suggest?" they ask.

Why not wallpaper with a white ground and gold medallions in it? Then for the new chair coverings a figured scenic material that is mostly bronze color. For lamps and accessories, we'd like crystal or pressed hobnail glass, and for the walls a round concave mirror with a Federal eagle on the frame. Then silhouettes and old fashioned pictures of grandparents and great aunts and maybe a bird or fruit picture or two. And how sweet it would be if they could get hold of some little Staffordshire figures to go in a row across the mantels!

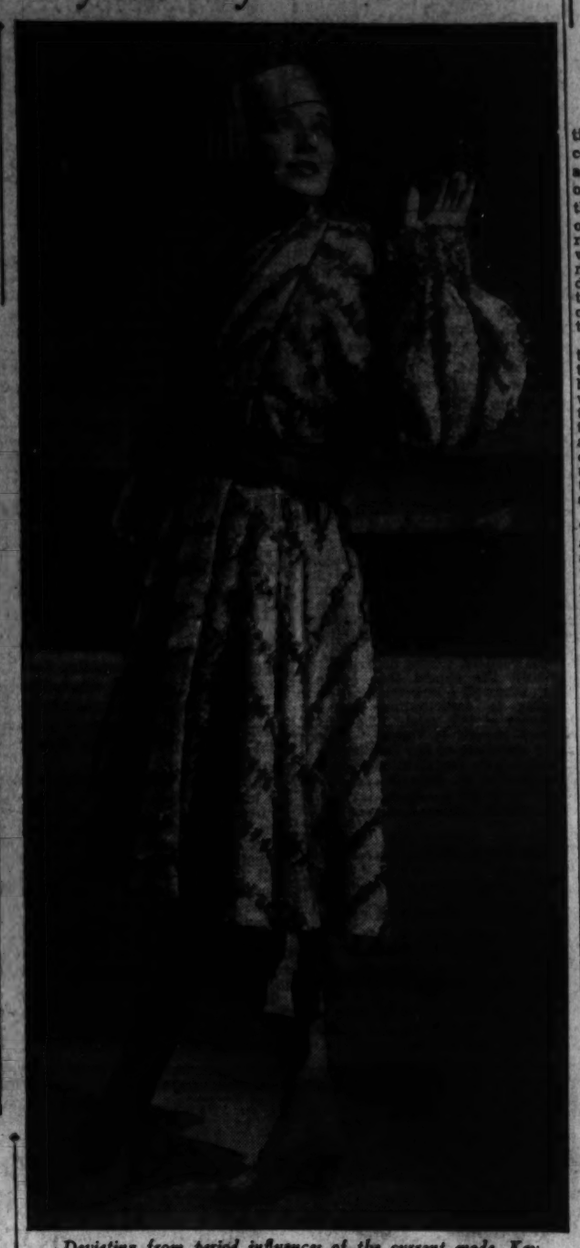
Daring Simplicity Her Key to Smartness



Deviating from period influences of the current mode, Kay Francis chooses the lovely evening gown at left, of silver-shot velvet. Intricate draping enhances the classical effect. For airplane travel, "America's best-dressed woman" chooses a coat in two shades of gray woolen with gray accessories.

Kay Francis' Dresses Have Simple Lines

"Best Dressed Woman" Prefers Wine Burgundy and All Gray Shades.

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

SOPHISTICATED simplicity is the choice in clothes when Kay Francis shops for her personal wardrobe. Miss Francis has recently received the title of the "best-dressed woman in America." This is the first time the medal of honor, presented by the Fashion Academy of New York, has been awarded to a screen star. The title had previously been held at different times by Mrs. Harrison Williams, Helen Wills Moody and Amelia Earhart.

In an interview, by mail, this noted screen star states a preference for wine and burgundy reds and all shades of gray. "My favorite evening dress is a very drab shade of taupe gray," she says. "A wide gold kid belt gives life and warmth to the color of the gown and brings out certain tints in my skin, which is very tanned." Miss Francis believes that line is vastly more important than color, however, when selecting a costume for any occasion, although she has a positive aversion to poudre blue and absolutely refuses to wear this popular tint.

While Miss Francis wears extreme clothes, accented by very low decolletage, on the screen, she says her own wardrobe flaunts no such necklines. "I prefer the boat-shaped neckline and choose it for the majority of my daytime costumes; it is smart, flattering and feminine and gives a soft effect to even the most extreme or severely tailored frock."

Regardless of the fact that jewelry is again in vogue and is being worn "by the bushels" by numerous smartly-groomed women this season, Miss Francis states that her personal choice in the matter is no jewelry, or very little. She wears pearls with her tailored things and for evening, and has a preference for real jewels; an emerald necklace, a prized possession, she says, is her favorite for formal occasions.

"The drop shoulder line intrigues me most for evening wear and I prefer a very simple skirt line which flows away gracefully from a tightly-fitted hip." Although Miss Francis is usually seen in intricate and elaborate costumes on the screen, she maintains she is much happier in sports and tailored clothes and wears them whenever possible in her private life. "As for shoes, whenever alligator or snakeskin suits, the costume, they are my choice."

Miss Francis' interest in clothes and her determination to wear what she, herself, believes is smart and becoming to her particular type, regardless of the vagaries of fashion, trends and influence of the mode, is proved by the fact that she designs many of the costumes for her personal wardrobe. "One of the most interesting things (to me) that I am taking on my trip to Europe," she said, "is a natural gray broadtail coat with double-banded collar and cuffs of silver fox. It has a very full skirt which is tightly-banded at the waistline. The coat is my own design and carries all of the points which I consider smart and attractive done up in fur."

Juvenile Movie Tastes Vary According to Sex

Atlantic City, N. J. (AP).—Boys like wild and woolly movies, and lean to that which is humorous and light-minded: Hammers and nails, and little dogs' tails.

Girls live for love, society and serious things: Sugar and spice and everything nice.

Miss E. Winifred Crawford, director of visual education in the Montclair schools, so described before the State Teachers Association the results of her experiments to determine what sort of movies children like.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

No Man Makes Unseemly Advances to Woman Unless She Covertly Invites Them, Says Correspondent.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am both amused and somewhat disgusted at the recountal of biological reactions and experiences that have been printed in your column from time to time, over the signatures "Rebekah," "Divorcee," and others of that ilk. I am very firmly of the opinion that no sober man in his senses will make any unseemly advances toward any woman unless a covert invitation to those advances has been either made or implied.

• • • •

This is not to say that there are not a lot of rotten men and rotten women in this old world of ours, but, experience has taught most level headed persons that the way to avoid evil is to be dead sure that you avoid all appearance thereof. Petting seems to be as prevalent these days as cigarette smoking. If the women and girls of this city or any other 1nd themselves to promiscuous lovemaking, they know within themselves that they are not only taking desperate chances but are inviting those subsequent overtures they so furiously resent. Yet these women, who invited every move, are the first to rush into print with the statement that all men are rotters! Surely the kind of sexy-siren who goes after her man, via conspicuous dress, much liquor, suggestive make-up and easy love-making, will meet only rotters, for that's the sort she is seeking, poor idiot?

• • • •

None the less, for the benefit of the semi-occasional fool who does not yet know her stuff, and does not know how to use her brain or her charms successfully, allow me to state very positively that the one and only basis for enduring marriage or for enduring friendship since both require precisely the same technique is RESPECT. Respect not only for the person on whom you may center your affections, but most important of all, self respect.. The man or woman past puppyhood who indulges in extra-marital relations, thinking that is the way to win either "him" or "her," is just a plain garden variety of fool.

• • • •

No woman who respects herself, her tradition and her family, will allow herself to indulge in this kind of thing, unless she is at heart a hussy. And no man who has the first essential quality of manhood will ever ask a girl whom he admires and whom he respects, to indulge in such affairs without benefit of clergy. I am willing to make all allowances in the world for loneliness and for propinquity, but let every girl and every man remember this: he has to live with his own thoughts, his own inner self and his own ideals. And that's the hell of it.

• • • •

Living life is no cinch for anyone. It is damn difficult to live a life successfully. But the difference between men and beasts, between women and sloths, is that peculiar self-respect that cautions one to listen to the wee small voice of conscience. And if one is not too far gone in passion or indulgence, that wee small voice can make itself heard anywhere, and it will always say: Respect yourself. You will thus command and merit the respect of others. And without this solid basis of respect, no human relationship is worthwhile. X. Y. Z.

"The Jaundic'd Eye."

DEAR X. Y. Z.: There is some truth in what you say here. But I believe that many objective minded, truly understanding men and women thoroughly versed in the study of manners and morals will join me in stoutly denying your statement that "no sober man in his senses will make advances toward any woman unless a covert invitation to those advances has been either made or implied."

• • • •

Alexander Pope well expressed what I believe to be true in his oft-quoted couplet: "All seems infected that th' infected spy, as all looks yellow to the jaundic'd eye." A man whose moral outlook is jaundiced is very apt to assume that all women, and particularly those who happen to attract his eye, are motivated by the same desires as animate himself, regardless of how chaste these women may be in thought, or how decorous in demeanor. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

TODAY'S HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

Concentrated Foods Undesirable.

Some years ago a French scientist announced that food could be concentrated so that one could take a full repast by swallownig two or three calories. It was held that the commissary problems of armies on the march, explorers in remote regions, and cross-country hikers were banished for all time. I am not so sure just how far this pipe dream was carried, but it was stated that a week's supply of nutriment could be packed into an ordinary tobacco pouch.

The idea was so decidedly contrary to the rule of nature that even though it were possible few would be likely to adopt it. Furthermore, we know that disuse of such structures as the teeth and the digestives tract would in time bring about atrophy, and a thousand years on pill regimen would find the human family toothless and the intestinal tube a foot or so in length instead of its present 28 feet.

Most of us prefer our three "squares" daily. There is something about mealtime that aids relaxation and brings peace and harmony into the home. It is part of the picture of family life. How silly it would be if the members of the household gathered at the dinner table—father and mother each taking three pills, the youngster two each, and the baby a half of one. No! Eating—while not the "chief end of man"—is a necessary and salutary break in the daily routine.

At any rate, as long as we have stomachs, trouble may come if we abuse them. Some 40 or 50 years ago a certain group of physicians declared that there was no such thing as gastritis—inflammation of the stomach. They held that distress incident to the taking of sustenance could occur only when some positive lesion, such as a gastric ulcer or tumor growth was present.

Recent investigation, however, has shown that chronic inflammatory states of the lining of the alimentary tract are fairly common. The symptoms at first are not prominent, although a gradually failing appetite is significant. Later, if one forces himself to take nourishment, a mild sense of nausea may appear. A feeling of pressure, fullness, and of bloating usually appears.

Most cases do well on a commonsense, hygienic regime, which consists of the use of two or three glasses of water an hour before each meal.

Next, the importance of eating slowly is stressed. The American habit of bolting meals is anything but sensible. Each mouthful should be thoroughly masticated and from 30 to 40 minutes as a minimum allotted to so simple a meal as breakfast.

It is now believed that there are more cases of gastritis than of ulcer and all other digestive disorders put together. We are fortunate that they can be remedied relatively easily.

June Travis Noted For Her Glove Styles

Hollywood.—June Travis is making Hollywood glove-conscious. For sports wear she has peasant mittens in bright solid wools set off with a dash of Tyrolean embroidery. Her riding gloves are brown pigskin with tiny vents across the back. With a cloth coat trimmed in krimmer she wears kid gloves with gauntlets of matching fur. Kid in various shades is also her choice for tailored suits.

For formal evening wear she likes white glace gloves, which she protects, in the modern style, by pulling finely woven white string gloves over them. These "protector" gloves, incidentally, are quite a find. In cold climates they help to keep the fingers warm and in California the girls wear them to keep their gloves spotless, because nothing soils quite as rapidly as white gloves.

Parents Urged Not to Pamper Sick Children

By Alice Clarissa Richmond.

WHEN MARY was a tiny child she underwent a mastoid operation. For years afterward her mother had to watch the child's ears and was always anxious if Mary had a cold or went swimming, lest the infection, from within or without, cause a recurrence of the trouble. By the time she was 10 years old Mary was herself "ear conscious" and worried over every slight cough or attack of snuffles that came her way.

In fact, her worrying was not confined to colds or ear infections. Mary had found that any ailment, however trifling, was enough to focus the family attention on her, and she used the weapon whenever she felt the need of getting into the limelight or squirming out of an unpleasant situation.

Not one in the household could be comfortably ill, because Mary at once had a symptom or two of her own, which served to divide the care and attention due the real sufferer.

Hepbron Talks To Lions Club Here On Crime

Acting Research Director Tells Lunch Parley of Objectives.

Speaking yesterday before a meeting of the Washington Lions Club at the Mayflower Hotel, James M. Hepbron, acting director of the Washington Criminal Justice Association, outlined purposes of the organization and described current efforts to promote criminal justice by delving into police and court records.

Following his talk, 14 members of the local Lions Club subscribed to individual memberships in the criminal justice group. The club as a whole agreed to support Washington's drive against crime.

"The Criminal Justice Association," said Hepbron, "is a fact-finding, fact-analyzing research body. We are not hunting heads, nor are we a detective agency. We are merely seeking an answer to Washington's crime problem through co-operation with District officials."

Developments in the group's investigation thus far, Hepbron continued, have brought facts to light which are materially aiding efforts to control crime and promote justice. Civic, business and District officials, he said, have joined to seek an ultimate solution to the problem.

Unable to appear personally before an increasing number of organizations which desire information on activities of the Criminal Justice Association, Hepbron has asked C. Delanos Ames, president of the Baltimore Criminal Justice body, to substitute for him at several meetings.

Spanish War Veteran Slain in Military Home

Los Angeles, Nov. 18 (AP).—Capt. Ransom P. Ham, 62, Spanish War veteran, was shot to death today in his room at the National Military Home in West Los Angeles. Walter B. Boyston, sergeant in the veteran company at the home, was arrested and held for investigation.

Capt. William Bright, of the Sheriff's homicide squad, said veterans told him they saw Boyston, with an automatic pistol, run out of Ham's room after five shots were fired. He said members of Ham's company told him Boyston had been drinking several weeks and Ham had threatened to demote him.

Old "Burning Daylight" Slowing Up; Dead Shot Globe Girdler Pauses Here

JACK LLOYD (BURNING DAYLIGHT).

Baron Munchausen wouldn't stand a ghost of a chance with Capt. Jack Lloyd—"Burning Daylight" is what they call him, pardner—because the captain has clippings to prove what he says is true.

"Burning Daylight" scorched through Washington yesterday heading for the warm winter sun of Florida and paused long enough at The Washington Post to spin a few yarns and pick up another clipping.

Hold your hat, stranger, here we go!

He killed 69 men on the Western frontier—that's why they call him "Burning Daylight," he reached for his gun so fast, you see—fought with the Cossack Legion of Death in the Russo-Japanese War; did a hitch in the French Foreign Legion when it was a Legion; helped the British end the Boer War; backed up Teddy Roosevelt in Cuba; rode with Pancho Villa for four years; served as a major in the British Intelligence Corps; was one of Sandino's front-line brain trusters and took part in so many South American revolutions he has forgotten which sides he fought on.

Had enough, stranger!

Well, you haven't heard anything yet.

"Burning Daylight" was in the Klondike when they found gold, in Kimberly when they found diamonds and he's followed the oil derricks from Baku, Russia, to the Texas oil fields.

Just name a place, stranger, and "Burning Daylight" will spin a yarn about it. The Congo. Sure he was there. See those stones? Well sir, they're genuine tiger eyes and you won't find them anywhere but in the Congo.

"Burning Daylight" is slowing up now and can't get around like he used to. He was 68 last June. Since March he's only been able to get around to 37 States and nine foreign countries.

Last time the captain was in Washington was in 1910. Buffalo Bill persuaded him to travel with Bill's Wild West Show. The captain was a sharpshooter.

"I always shoot from the hip, learned how to do it down in Del Rio, Tex., when I was a kid. They started calling me "Burning Daylight" when I was 16 'cause if a man reached for a gun on me I'd burn daylight through him before he knew what was happening.

"Jack London wrote a book about me. "Burning Daylight" it's called, and I've got it right here to prove it. Yes sir, that Jack London was a great guy. Met him in the First and Last Chance Bar in Frisco. I had just slipped down the rat rope of a ship out of China and didn't have a dime. Jack and I began spinning yarns and drinking, and he got the idea for the book. You remember "Dede," the girl in the book. Well I married her and she died down in Johannesburg. Some of my newspaper friends down there look after her grave.

"Oh yes, I was a newspaperman in my day. Worked on 6,000 newspapers in 57 countries. Yes sir. Started out in the West. It was tough being a newspaperman then. But I'd come into a new town, find myself a desk, flop my two guns down and say 'Boys you've got a newspaper.' You had to know how to handle your guns, too."

Oh, Capt. Jack knew them all. Poker Alice and Calamity Jane and Billy the Kid. He was an editor in Leadville, Cripple Creek, Silver City, Gold Creek, Durango—just name a town, stranger.

Capt. Jack came to Washington in the wedding party of "Silver Dollar" Tabor to witness the marriage of "Baby Doe." Man that was a party! Capt. Jack was editor of the Leadville News, then.

Capt. Jack had a million when he came out of the Klondike, but they took it away from him in New York with adding machines. He hasn't worried much about money since then.

And stranger if you ever doubt Capt. Jack's word, its just too bad. He swings into action before you can bat your eyes and opens a scrap book that would break your back to carry. He has eight others at home.

Civic Leaders Seek Maxwell Trial Change

Neighbors Doubt Teacher Can Get Fair Hearing in Court at Wise.

Many leading citizens of the Lonesome Pine region of Virginia will appear in Circuit Court at Wise, Va., Monday morning to testify that they don't think that Edith Maxwell, accused of the "slipper murder" of her father, can get a fair trial there.

These citizens recently signed affidavits in which they urged that Miss Maxwell's trial be held away from Wise. They think that the publicity and prejudice growing out of Edith's first trial at Wise, when she was sentenced to 25 years in the penitentiary, have made it impossible to find an impartial jury there for the second trial.

Judge Ezra Carter, who has been assigned to preside at the second trial, has notified Charles Henry Smith, of Alexandria, Edith's counsel, to have some of these citizens in court Monday when arguments will be heard on a motion for a change of venue.

Post readers, whose contributions financed the appeal that brought Edith Maxwell a new trial, are now sending in contributions for the expenses of this trial. The young woman herself is "broke," as are other members of her family.

Yesterday's contributions were:

France to Settle War Debt to U. S. If Bill Is Reduced

Paris, Nov. 18 (U.P.).—France has reopened negotiations with the United States with a view of resuming payments on her overdue war debt, the United Press learned tonight.

The plan contemplates resumption of annual payments as soon as possible, a government official stated, once an agreement has been reached between the two countries on a "writing down" of the total debt.

(The United States Government announced on November 15, 1935, a total French debt of $4,021,070,341, both funded and unfunded. Payments by France on principal and interest had amounted to $486,075,891 as of that date.)

Francis de Tessan, French undersecretary of state, who returned from the United States today, where he participated in the fiftieth anniversary ceremonies at the Statue of Liberty, had a thorough discussion of the war debts question with President Roosevelt while there.

German Auto Party Due at Show Today

Touring the country to observe conditions in the automotive field, a group of German automobile manufacturers arrive in the Capital today to visit the seventeenth annual automobile show at Calvert Exhibit Hall.

The visitors were scheduled to be luncheon guests of the Washington Automotive Trade Association, sponsors of the show, at 12:30 p. m. at Wardman Park Hotel.

Their program called for them to visit the new car exhibit in the afternoon, be received at the White House and then be taken on a sightseeing trip through the city.

After leaving Washington, the Germans will visit Detroit, Akron and other cities before returning abroad.

The show, which opened last Saturday, will continue through this Saturday, with daily visiting hours from 11 a. m. to 11 p. m.

Reporters Befriend Hero of Bus Tragedy

Denver, Nov. 18 (AP).—The hero of the Towner School bus tragedy, Bryan Untiedt, became a page in the State House of Representatives today.

He dropped into the pressroom at the State Capitol and explained to newspapermen his job as a truck driver on a road construction job was completed. He needed another.

Reporters took the 12-year-old youth to the patronage committee. He was put to work immediately. Untiedt was a guest of the White House after his heroism was credited with saving 15 school children's lives when they were trapped in a bus during a blizzard in March, 1931, near Towner, Colo.

Price Too Low, Turkeys To Get 30-Day Reprieve

Jasper, Ind., Nov. 18 (AP).—Hundreds of southern Indiana turkeys are going to get a 30-day reprieve at Thanksgiving time, because of low prices, growers said today.

Growers in this area, bemoaning current quotations on the Thanksgiving Day bird, said they would hold their "crop" for the Christmas trade rather than accept present local prices of 12 to 13 cents a pound.

Hemostat in Abdomen.

Tulsa, Okla., Nov. 18 (AP).—A 6-inch hemostat, surgical instrument used to close severed veins, was removed today from a woman's abdomen, where Dr. John Holladay said it had been left in an operation four years ago.

AAA Furloughs

A plan to give 90-day furloughs to those AAA employes who are to be dismissed soon is being considered by AAA officials.

The proposal which is awaiting the approval of the AAA administrator, would give the dismissed employes more time to find employment elsewhere in the Government without losing their status. The furlough plan would also give administrative officials greater leeway in wielding the axe. Although section 213 of the economy act must be followed whether employes are furloughed or separated, officials would not be bound as rigidly by other factors as veterans' preference.

Most of the dismissals are still scheduled for about January 1, with some as early as December 15. Although entire units are to be eliminated as their work is completed, T. Weed Harvey, business manager of the AAA, said the dismissals would come "across the board," with all unit staffs suffering.

Resignations continue to increase, Harvey said, and the number dismissed will not be higher than 900, and probably less. Under the new act the East Central and Northeast Divisions in this city are to have a staff of about 600 employes, most of whom have already been shifted.

WPA unionists have begun circulating petitions for the signature of WPA employes requesting Hopkins not to reduce the present staff. Further action is to be taken at a union meeting tonight.

Rex Tugwell's resignation as administrator of the Resettlement Administration is likely to hasten the reported merging of that unit with the Department of Agriculture. RA personnel incidentally has been reduced between September 30 and October 31, from 13,923 to 13,638.

Champagne

Some of our more sophisticated readers may already know what makes champagne, but for the benefit of those who share our own ignorance on the subject—champagne's distinctive flavor is the result of a second fermentation of the wine after it has been bottled. A little sugar is added to the wine when it is bottled and that is the cause for the loud pop when the cork is pulled out and for the bubbles.

Several years ago a Frenchman by the name of Charmat developed a process making possible this second fermentation and it was this Frenchman who indirectly is responsible for our own interest in the subject. Some American manufacturers got hold of his process and tried to label their wines champagne, but the other day Federal Alcohol Administrator W. A. Alexander refused them permission. All he would concede was that the liquor could be called "Sparkling Wine."

Alexander's ruling was based on a hearing that was held at the Mayflower Hotel last May. Champagne experts not only from this country but from France and Germany were called in as tasters, and Washington never heard so many corks pop. One interesting sidelight of this orgy of champagne tasting was the revelation that to a great many persons, carbonated apple cider was champagne. (That was the sort of champagne most of us thought it would be so thrilling to drink during prohibition.)

One of the two dismissed fingerprint clerks who made that tour of the Federal Bureau of Investigation Friday afternoon, reports that a new wall motto has been set up above the signing-in book in the identification section. The motto is a framed quotation, too long to reprint here, from Elbert Hubbard on "Loyalty." Its gist is that when you're working for a man speak well of him, and that if you don't like your job, quit—but don't raise a fuss.

Navy Promotions

A definite promotion policy to prevent a turnover in lower clerical grades is requested by the Navy's Surgeon General, P. S. Rossiter, in his annual report on the work of the Bureau of Medicine and Surgery. He writes:

"The civilian complement of the bureau has been maintained at the appropriated strength of 52 employes, although there continues to be a considerable turnover in the lower clerical grades resulting in an undue loss of production. This condition can be remedied only by the adoption of a definite policy for promotions. During the period from July 1, 1930, to June 30, 1936, no administrative promotions were made in the bureau, partially due to legislative restrictions, but chiefly as the result of insufficient appropriations and various economy measures.

Although denied advancement or even prospect thereof, the general morale of employes of longer service has remained undiminished and is evidence of the high character and loyalty of the bureau personnel. However there is need for the adoption of a systematic policy of rewarding faithful and efficient service by promotion at regular intervals.

The tangle in Commerce Lodge of the A. F. G. E. has been ironed out with the help of National Vice President Michael D. Schaefer. James Burns is to continue as District department delegate and is to be reimbursed for his Detroit convention expenses. At the next meeting officers for the new year will be nominated.

Agricultural Lodge No. 31 of the A. F. G. E. will stage a weenie roast Saturday afternoon in Rock Creek Park. So, too, in another part of the park, will the five ousted A. F. G. E. lodges. The Farm Credit Club will hold its first dance of the season Saturday night in the Hall of Nations at the Washington Hotel. Also scheduled for Saturday night, is the Georgia State Society's Military and Naval Ball at the Shoreham Hotel.

The following Commerce officials are attending the twenty-third National Foreign Trade Convention that opened yesterday in Chicago: Assistant Secretary Ernest G. Draper, Alexander V. Bus Income Drops, Fare Rise Is Likely Chief Engineer of P.U.C. Reports Loss on Nearly Every Line in City.

Action Foreshadowed as Board Weighs Takoma Park Substitutions.

A shadow of the impending hearing on the application of the Capital Transit Co. to increase fares appeared late yesterday as the Public Utilities Commission concluded a three-day open forum on the company's petition to substitute buses for street cars for Takoma Park service.

Fred A. Sager, chief engineer of the commission, raised the threat of higher fares by pointing out that the transit company's bus lines in general are losing money and threaten to impose a financial burden on the street car patrons.

The commission expects to hold a public hearing early next month on the petition of the transit company to raise its fares from $1 to $1.25 weekly pass or ten cents cash and from a token rate of 7¼ cents to 8 1-3 cents.

Sager said that even the heavily traveled Chevy Chase bus line is losing money as is the popular but experimental Takoma Park express bus service. He then made the observation:

"If the Chevy Chase bus line had been charging 10 cents cash or $1.25 weekly pass fare in September, however, it would have made a profit of $400."

Trolleys Profitable.

Contrasting this, he said, are the records of the street car lines on Fourteenth street and Georgia avenue. The former last year, after operating expenses and depreciation reserve were deducted, made a profit of 3.38 per cent on the investment in tracks and equipment, while the latter, on the same basis, earned 3.14 per cent.

The Sixteenth street and Petworth bus lines, however, he said, are operating at a small profit.

The hearing closed with an impassioned plea by William McK. Clayton, white-haired civic spokesman and representative of the Brightwood Citizens Association, for retention of the single tracks on Kennedy and Third streets regardless of what action is taken on the proposal to increase the bus service to Takoma Park.

The commission took the case under advisement after permitting all parties until November 30 to file briefs.

Warning the commission that the residential Washington of the future will be concentrated in the northern and western sections of the city and in Maryland, Clayton pointed out that if the tracks are removed and the bus service is found inadequate it would be practically impossible to return tostreet railway operation.

Misjudgement Alleged.

He charged that the commission has "acted hastily" in approving abandonment of tracks since the street railway merger. When asked by Riley E. Elgen, chairman, for specific instances, he cited Connecticut avenue and Anacostia.

When Richmond B. Keech, vice chairman, observed that the patronage on these lines had increased as a result of the change to buses and that the patrons seemed satisfied, Clayton declined to discuss the comparative popularity of buses and street cars other than to say that "the people don't love the buses, they've been forced to them."

"We believe that the abandonment of street car tracks has gone far enough," he said. "We won't, however, object to the extension of bus service so long as the tracks are left undisturbed."

Clayton chided the Commissioners for the ineffectiveness of a two-year-old order for double tracks on Third and Kennedy streets, but added:

"If necessary, we would be willing to forego the double track on Kennedy and Third street at this time rather than give up the tracks."

Earlier in the day, William A. Roberts, as counsel for Ninth street business houses, introduced witnesses tao show that value of property on that street and the harm done to it by abandonment of the street car tracks.

Mercury Tumbles As Winter Blows Into Washington

A north wind roaring from winters' home in the Arctic swept the seasons' first real cold wave into Washington last night.

The Weather Bureau's thermometer began early yesterday a downward plunge that forecasters predicted would stop somewhere in the low 20's by morning.

Moderate north winds in Washington shifted to northwest gales along the Atlantic Coast, where from Sandy Hook, N. J., to Hatteras, N. C., the Weather Bureau ordered storm warnings posted. Atlantic shipping was delayed—at least four liners, the Associated Press reported, had run into such heavy weather that it appeared the arrival of each would be held up a day—and at Alban, N. Y., high winds forced down Louise Thaden, Washington woman flier and winner of this year's Bendix cross-country trophy.

It was below freezing, at 31, at 8 p. m., and by 10 p. m. it had dropped 4 degrees, to 27.

Fair and continued cold was expected today.

Citizens' Group Assails Action Of Federation

Chevy Chase Unit Scores Methods of Parent Organization.

The Chevy Chase Citizens Association, one of the older civic groups in the District, rebuked the Federation of Citizens Associations, mother organization, for its "high-handed" methods last night.

The group, which last month threatened to break away from the federation, settled the matter last night after hearing a report from its executive committee recommending that letters be sent to the federation and all its member bodies asking for better representation in city-wide questions.

Chief reason for the action was the "red rider," brain child of former Representative Blanton, of Texas, which has been in committee for nearly a year.

Contending the federation was founded solely for the purpose of representing the whole opinion of District citizens, the Chevy Chase group said that in the rider case it acted on its own initiative. Eventually, a questionnaire was sent to teachers in the public school system.

Many member bodies of the Federation were split on the rider question when the bill was introduced on the Hill by Blanton and a consensus of civic groups never was taken. The rider dispute is still unsettled.

"The federation," the resolution stated, "is capable of accomplishing the purpose for which it was founded, but in these questions it has failed to afford an opportunity in advising the people how to vote on important matters."

A resolution opposing any increase in gasoline taxes also was adopted. A short talk on fingerprinting and the methods used by the Federal Bureau of Investigation was made by Agent L. B. Nichols.

The Dahlgren Terrace Citizens Association last night went on record as recommending that the post of District traffic director be abolished, and control of all traffic in the metropolitan area returned to Maj. Ernest W. Brown.

In this way, the group held, numerous parking evils could be "more effectively dealt with." Double parking was scored especially by the organization.

A letter was drafted to be sent to President Roosevelt, urging the continuance of the office of people's counsel, stating that this was practically the only voice District residents have in the Government.

Woman Is Injured In Auto Collision

A woman was injured seriously yesterday when the automobile she was driving collided with another car at River road northwest and Western avenue.

The woman, Mrs. Agnes Nash, 44, of 3023 P street northwest, was treated at Georgetown Hospital and later transferred to Emergency Hospital. Dr. Henry S. Milone, 29, of Bethesda, Md., an instructor at the Georgetown University Medical School, driver of the other car, suffered cuts and bruises.

Police later charged Milone with reckless driving.

Physicians said Mrs. Nash, who suffered head injuries, fractured ribs and internal injuries, was in serious condition.

Dental Office on Wheels To Serve Coast Guardsmen

Complete Laboratory Installed in Specially-Built Trailer; Tour of Southern Bases Will Start in Two Weeks.

A dental office on wheels, so novel that it should take the patient's mind off the buzzing drill, made its appearance in Washington yesterday.

Its full name is the United States Public Health Service Motorized Dental Station. The first such convenience to be used by the health service, it will cater exclusively to officers and enlisted men of the Coast Guard.

The station is a specialized semi-trailer, an automobile furnishing motive power. It is 22 feet long and approximately 8 feet wide.

When a guardsman with a toothache steps inside, he may be assured that, no matter what's wrong with his molars, there will be no lack of equipment to right things.

The chair and X-ray are the latest type Ritter unit. There are a dark room for developing X-ray plates, a lead-lined storage space for films, a shiny new sterilizer, jets for administering gas, a wash basin and plenty of drawers for supplies.

There is even a lathe for the production of false teeth and filing down old ones so they'll fit better.

Will Tour South First.

The electrical equipment uses alternating current, but when the mobile unit strikes a base where only direct current is available all you have to do is turn on the rotary converter.

Dr. David Cooper, who will be in charge, will have a dressing closet with full-length mirror, adequate storage space for his linens, instruments and other essentials, a writing desk and numerous other conveniences. His assistant, whose many duties include driving the car and keeping the equipment in order, will be C. S. Rhodes, pharmacist's mate, detailed by the Coast Guard.

It is planned to put the portable dispensary in operation in a couple of weeks. First stop will be Coast Guard Base No. 6 at Fort Lauderdale, Fla. Next on the itinerary are the air station at Miami, Fla., St. Petersburg air station, the Pascagoula, Miss., station Biloxi, Miss., air station; Gulfport, Miss., and New Orleans.

Served at Academy.

That should take the unit through the winter and early spring, according to the reckoning of Dr. Charles William Wckenman, chief of the health service dental section. Leaving New Orleans, the operating room will roll northward via Coast Guard stations along the Eastern seaboard.

At the present time when a guardsman requires dental treatment he enters a marine hospital or goes to a civilian dentist who does the work by contract with the Government. The motorized station is expected not only to be more convenient for the patient but to cut down expenses.

It represents the fulfillment of an ambition cherished for years by Dr. C. T. Messner, late chief of the dental section, who did not live to see his dream come true. He died last May.

Dr. Cooper was chosen as commander of the unit because of his long association with the Coast Guard. For two seasons he was dental officer of the Bering Sea ice and seal patrol force. Later he was assigned to the Coast Guard Academy at New London, Conn.

Youths Sponsor Ball.

National officers of the Young Democratic Clubs of America are sponsoring the Democratic victory ball at the Willard Hotel tonight. The affair is to be held under the auspices of Young Democratic Activities, Inc., assisted by the Women's Democratic Council and various State and civic organizations.

Bandits Find Clients Tough, Pass Up Profit

Victims Unconventional; Sock on Jaw, Fake Faint Answer to Guns.

What with having their clients sock them in the face, pull fake faints and otherwise behave in extremely unconventional fashion, bandits last night passed through a harrowing and fruitless evening.

Philip Menick, 301 K street northwest, was the first nonconformist encountered by the bandits. Four of them, two with drawn guns, invaded his liquor store. Menick let fly a haymaker which caught one of the robbers on the jaw and caused his gun to explode. Completely unnerved, the bandits fled.

"I was so excited I forgot it was a holdup," apologetically explained Menick later.

Not a bit excited was Miss Edith M. Sandiland when a robber with drawn gun entered the cleaning store at 1426 Wisconsin avenue northwest, where she is employed.

"I just threw up my hands and pretended to faint. This scared the robber and he fled," she explained.

By this time word apparently had passed through the underworld that victims were in an unconventional mood and it was decided to sneak up on the next client. Miss Florence Cook, 23, 1445 N street northwest, was grabbed from behind by a colored man armed with a heavy stick. He attempted to snatch her purse. Screaming and kicking, Miss Cook refused to be robbed and the man fled.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, almost covered himself with glory. He was only a few hundred yards from the store in which Mrs. Sandiland pretended to faint. He heard the broadcast to scout cars after Miss Sandiland decided it was safe to revive and summon aid. Maj. Brown was the first policemen to arrive on the scene. But the bandit was far, far away.

Architect Hears His Work Praised By Spirited Cabby

The taxi driver who picked up Eric Kebbon, the Washington architect, who lives at 218 Cleveland street northwest, at the union depot in Tallahassee, Fla., yesterday had more than a touch of civic pride.

"You ought to see our new postoffice," he said, pleasantly. "In fact, you must see it."

So he drove Kebbon by the structure, pointing to its architectural beauty.

In the rear of the cab Kebbon nodded, smiled and agreed. He thanked the driver, for he had worked on plans for the building.

School Board Selects Head At Roosevelt

Miss May P. Bradshaw to Succeed Davis as Principal.

21 Non-Resident Pupils Admitted Since Kemp Case Ruling.

Miss May P. Bradshaw, assistant principal of Roosevelt High School for the last 12 years, will become principal of the school upon the retirement of Allan Davis, December 1, the Board of Education decided yesterday.

In promoting Miss Bradshaw on recommendation of Superintendent Frank W. Ballou and of its personnel committee, the board cited her long experience in the District school system and outstanding record as an educator.

Miss Bradshaw is a native of Washington, received all of her elementary, high school and college education here. She has been in the local school system for 35 years, beginning as a first-grade teacher and supervisor in Towers School in 1901. In 1909 she was promoted to history, English and geography in Business High School, and in 1924 made assistant principal of the same school, which later became Roosevelt High School.

In this executive capacity Miss Bradshaw always has been assistant to the man whom she succeeds. Davis, veteran educator of more than 50 years' service in Washington schools, retires at the end of this month.

16,625 in High Schools.

Twenty-one nonresident pupils have been admitted to District schools since the board agreed to receive such children pending the outcome of the Lois Kemp appeal case, Dr. Ballou reported. Six of these, he said, had been entered in Gordon Junior High School, wheih school officials declared "overcrowded" at the time of Lois Kemp, 11-year-old Clarendon, Va., girl, was denied enrollment last September.

One nonresident pupil has been admitted to E. V. Brown School, one to Hine Junior High, two to Langley one to McKinley High, one to Roosevelt High, five to Western High and four to Woodrow Wilson High.

Dr. Ballou at the same time submitted an annual report on schoolhouse accommodations showing that high school enrollment on November 1 this year stood at 16,625, which is 1,500 students higher than the capacity of the high-school buildings. In the junior high schools there are 19,363 boys and girls enrolled in buildings having a capacity of 16,997.

Contract Census Favored.

The board voted to seek an early conference with District Commissioners to discuss expediting progress of the $30,000,000 five-year school-building program bill.

The board authorized the superintendent to take steps with the Commissioners to let a contract for the tabulation of school census returns. An appropriation of $1,200 was included in the school budget this year for the tabulation, and Dr. Ballou recommended doing the job by contract rather than by employing added personnel in the department of school attendance and work permits. He pointed out yesterday that while school attendance officers have gathered statistics for the enumeration of all children between the ages of 3 and 18 the figures never have been tabulated.

From the special teachers' committee investigating the magazine Scholastic the board received a report recommending that the publication be returned to the English classroom reading lists. Scholastic wos brought under fire last winter on charges of communistic indoctrination.

Commencement Dates Set.

The board last spring approved a preliminary report of the teachers' committee clearing the magazine of these charges, but has not yet acted on putting it back on the approved magazine list.

Midyear commencement in junior and senior high schools will take place January 28 and 29, the board decided.

On the recommendation of Dr. Ballou the board appointed Dr. Harvey Smith and Dr. G. C. Wilkinson, assistant superintendents, to serve on the program co-ordinating committee of the District of Columbia recreation committee.

Leave was granted Dr. Ballou to attend the meeting of the National Council of State Superintendents and Commissioners of Education December 7 to 10, at Chattanooga, Tenn.

Two Ask Court To Make Police Call Off Guard

Slaying Witnesses 'Want to Be Alone,' Despite Threat on Lives.

Washington detectives may be a "thin red line of heroes when the band begins to play," but as constant companions they ruin health and happiness and interfere with business, Harry (Spike) Behrle and William R. Carpenter told Justice Joseph W. Cox in District Court yesterday.

Their suit for an injunction brought to light the fact that the police department believes an attempt on their lives might be made and is desirous of protecting them, for they were witnesses to the shooting of Joseph E. O'Brien last July.

Ever since the "grapevine" brought the department news of threats against the pair—November 10 to be exact—three detectives, E. E. Thompson, Michael J. Dowd and J. K. Baker, working on 8-hour shifts, have been in constant attendance, waking, sleeping, eating in their every walk of life.

That Behrle and Carpenter either believe the threats just a romantic notion of the police or prefer to risk assassination rather than suffer constant company of a detective was evident when their attorneys, Myron Ehrlich and F. Joseph Donohue, asked Justice Cox for surcease.

In hearing the plea, Justice Cox had opportunity to see the bodyguard in action. Detective Sergt. Thompson was with Behrle and Carpenter when they arrived at the courthouse, stayed with them while they were there and went with them when they left.

The justice ordered Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, to show cause by 2:30 p. m. today why he should not be enjoined from continuing the protective gesture.

Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, said last night that "although these men did not appeal for police protection, I thought, for the protection of these men and other citizens, a police guard was necessary. And you can quote me that the guard will not be removed unless by a court order." He said he was prepared to fight the injunction suit.

Droop's to Grant Extra Week's Pay

E. F. Droop & Sons, music dealers, of 1300 G street northwest, Wednesday celebrated their seventy-ninth business anniversary.

Philatelists Arrange Program for Week

National Philatelic Week will be observed tonight at the Bureau of Engraving and Printing when Director Alvin W. Hall entertains members of Washington philatelic societies. The bureau maintains an exhibition room of all material used in the manufacture of postage stamps as well as many other interesting features of stamp production.

Tomorrow night at the Hamilton Hotel the Philatelic Ananias Club will meet and on Saturday night at the Hamilton Hotel the third annual banquet of the Collectors Club will bring the week's observances to a close.

City's Burden In Direct Aid Holds Level

October Data Indicate Relief Load Is Now at Stable Figure.

Costs for Month Total $163,178 for 5,539 Cases on List.

Washington's direct relief load, as measured by the number of cases carried by the public assistance division of the welfare department, seems to have reached a temporarily stable figure, it was indicated yesterday as Miss M. Alice Hill, director, submitted her monthly report.

The report showed there was little change in the setup for October, as compared with September. Relief expenditures for the month totaled $163,178.91 for 5,539 cases, most of which represent families. The average relief payment for each case was $29.50.

Cases on general relief decreased by 71 in October, but they were more than matched by cases transferred from relief to old-age pensions, which by the end of the month were being paid 1,178 persons. An additional 1,250 applications are being investigated.

Commenting on the 4,485 cases of unemployment receiving District aid, a welfare department statement said:

"This figure is approximately the same as the public assistance division has been carrying for the last two years. It represents the residue of people who could not take work if there were any for them and who have no recourse except governmental aid."

The 5,539 total of persons who actually received aid in October was subdivided thus:

Dependent children, 1,091; home care, 245; old-age assistance, 97; needy blind aid, 72, and 3,154 other relief cases, including 1,254 families and 1,900 unattached persons.

Discussing the old-age pension disbursements, the welfare report pointed out that approximately 1,000 applications are not even being investigated "because of inadequate personnel limited by Congressional appropriation."

Of the 203 aged persons added to the pension rolls last month, 74 were between 65 and 70; 62 from 70 to 75; 78 from 75 to 90; 19 from 80 to 85; 5 from 85 to 90; 1 over 90, and 4 over 65, but exact age unknown.

Fort Myer to Conclude Fall Series of Parades

Col. J. M. Wainwright 3d, commanding officer at Fort Myer, yesterday announced the last of the fall series of dismounted parades and reviews will be held on the lawn in front of the bachelor officers' quarters tomorrow afternoon at 4:45 o'clock.

Both the Third Cavalry and the Sixteenth Field Artillery will participate, under the command of Lieut. Col. John Millikin, Third Cavalry, and reviewed by Col. Wainwright.

Noel Laing's Long Illness Is Fatal

Noted Gentleman Jockey Was 28, and Scion of Virginia Family.

He Was Famed for His Success in Handling Fractious Steeds.

Noel Laing, famed gentleman jockey and scion of a family of Virginia horsemen, died at Emergency Hospital here yesterday after a prolonged illness caused by a malignant infection.

Ill since March, the 28-year-old Laing entered the Washington hospital in September following treatment at a clinic in Rochester, Minn. His condition for the past several weeks had been critical.

At the bedside at the time of his death were his parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Laing, of Amissville, Va., and a brother, Douglas Laing, of Washington.

Laing had won wide-spread fame with his feats as both a jockey and trainer, sending many winners to the hunt races from the family estate in Rappahannock County, Va.

He was regarded as unusually successful with fractious thoroughbreds and for a number of years was the chosen rider for Mrs. Randolph Scott, the former Marion Du Pont Somerville.

Among his most notable triumphs was his victory astride Troublemaker in the 1932 Maryland Cup race when he rode the Somerville horse home first in one of the most severe steeplechase tests in America. Follwing that triumph he went to England, where he had the mount on Troublemaker in the 1933 Grand National at Aintree.

He rode Troublemaker in that thoroughbred's last race, the Maryland Cup, in which the horse's neck was broken in a fall. Troublemaker was buried on the grounds of the famous course.

While owning and training horses of his own, the most notable of which was Fairy Lore, Laing also trained thoroughbreds for Mrs. Grace H. Eustis, of New York and Washington; Col. Albert E. Peirce, of Canterbury Farms, Warrenton, Va.; R. V. N. Gambrill, of Morristown, N. J., and Mrs. Verner Z. Reed, jr., of New York.

In addition to his parents, Laing is survived by three brothers, Douglas, William, jr., and Geoffrey.

G. W. Declines Mythical Bid To Cuba

Ruling Body of Capital School Votes Against Havana Game.

George Washington University authorities early this morning definitely declined to participate in a New Year's Day football game sponsored by the Cuban Republic, to be played in Havana. The decision followed an all-night discussion between Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of the university; Jim Pixlee, director of athletics, and the president's council, comprised of heads of the various departments, which is vested with sole authority to act on such matters.

A prepared statement released at 1:30 o'clock by Max Farrington, assistant director of athletics, explained George Washington's position in the matter. It read:

"The athletic advisory committee of the George Washington University in session tonight discussed the possibility of a post-season football game. It announced that the George Washington University has not received a formal invitation to participate in such a game at Havana, but even, if such an invitation should have been received it could not have been accepted, owing to a policy adopted four years ago by the board of trustees of the university, which forbids participation in post-season games."

Brumbaugh, Buivid to Vie Saturday

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 18.—The King B's of Marquette and Duquesne—Buzz Buivid and Boyd Brumbaugh—will battle Saturday for All-American football recognition and bowl bids for their teams.

Capt. Buivid will lead Marquette's Golden Avalanche to Forbes Field undefeated and untied, looking for a possible game in the Rose Bowl, the Sugar Bowl or the Orange Bowl. His specialty is throwing passes.

Brumbaugh's favorite trick is intercepting enemy tosses, but he can run, pass, kick and smash the line, too, as Pitt's mighty Panthers and the rugged Carnegie Tech eleven will testify.

In defeating Pitt this year the Dukes turned a trick no Eastern team had been able to do in eight years. They lost their next game to little West Virginia Wesleyan and dropped another to Detroit, in which 140 yards in penalties they suffered played a big part.

Is Great Back.

Buivid is one of the Midwest's great backs. He is big, weighing 193 and standing 6 feet 1 inch, but fast. His running and tackling have been superior, but it is to his throwing arm that his veteran coach, Frank Murray, points with pride.

Buivid has thrown 97 passes and completed 50 in 7 games this season, touchdowns in addition to a total touchdowns in addition to a total gain of 679 yards. Nevertheless, Coach John (Little Clipper) Smith, of the Dukes, said today:

"Brumbaugh is one of the best all-around backs in the country. I'm basing my hopes for beating Marquette on his outplaying Buivid."

Brumbaugh, himself a passer of parts, has gained wide recognition for his defensive play and open field running. He has intercepted nine passes and batted down twice that many.

Six Touchdowns.

He has scored six touchdowns and placekicked 11 extra points. He does most of the punting and Smith credits his blocking with bringing the Dukes their winning touchdown against Pitt.

Duquesne scouts saw the Avalanche overwhelm four rivals and reported the two lines are "about even" with Marquette's backfield holding an edge.

Clipper Smith, however, declared: "We have a great opportunity and the Dukes don't mind being underdogs."

The battle between Buivid and Brumbaugh, the Dukes and the Avalanche, will attract crowd Duquesne officials estimated will fill Forbes Field to its capacity, 37,000. Marquette will bring two trainloads of fans.

Bet Against Duke Costs N.C. Student's Vacation

Edenton, N. C., Nov. 18 (U.P.).—Frank Holmes, North Carolina University student, wagered his services during the Christmas holidays against a $50 suit that Carolina would defeat Duke University's football team last week. Holmes will spend the entire holiday period except Christmas Day, working without wages for Dr. J. A. Powell, Edenton physician.

Marquette Expected To Accept Cuba's Bid

New York, Nov. 18 (A.P.).—The post-season football game New Year's Day feature of Cuba's "week-of-sports" carnival will have Auburn as one opponent, and Marquette, Pittsburgh Temple or George Washington as the other.

Carlos L. Henriquez, who is arranging the schedule for the week of December 26 to New Year's Day, said tonight Auburn has definitely accepted the invitation to play in the game at Havana, and that the acceptance from the other eleven is expected tomorrow. It was believed Marquette's so-far undefeated, united eleven would get the call.

The football game tops a program that includes fights, track and basketball. In the latter, Columbia, Tulane, Louisiana State, Mexico and Cuba will compete. Henriquez said Jesse Owens, the United States' one-man track team from Ohio State, had agreed to be on hand for the track exhibition.

Santa Clara Rejects Invitation to Cuba

By the United Press.

Santa Clara, Calif., Nov. 18.—Santa Clara, the West Coast's only unbeaten, untied football aggregation this season, tonight turned down an offer to play in Havana, Cuba, on New Year's Day.

Administrative and faculty objections to the long trip and the absence of players from classes were the basis for the rejection.

Sam Dunne, graduate manager of Santa Clara athletics, announced the rejection after a conference with Father Louis Rudolph, head of the Jesuit university in the Santa Clara Valley.

The school received two invitations to play in Havana. One came from Carlos Henriquez, director of sports for the Cuban government, and the other from Jack Meagher, coach of Alabama Poly (Auburn), suggesting the game as a rematch between his team and the Californians.

Landon 70-Pounders Win.

Dobson Sees Terp Victory Over G. U.

Game Will Be Close, and Maryland Lucky to Win, Says Coach.

Old Liners' Spirit Ought to Offset Hoyas Edge in Manpower.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

"Yessir, it's gonna be a mighty close ball game," said Frank Dobson, blowing on his hands and dancing a modified jig as frigid blasts cupped the practice field in its chilling paws. "Yessir," the Maryland coach repeated with all the gesticulations of keeping warm, "it's gonna be mighty close, and we'll have to play our best game of the season to win it.

He was referring, of course, to Saturday's game with Georgetown which will be committed at College Park in plain view of some 10,000 fans. It will be tough for several reasons, but Dobson figures the most important is the plentiful supply of reserves Jack Hagerty has at his command. The Hoyas are two, and in most instances three deep at every position, and with such manpower can make it awfully hard on the Terps' meager supply of backer-uppers.

Another thing, Maryland has fortunately escaped without any serious injuries thus far and Dobson has his fingers crossed for fear Saturday may bring an end to this good fortune. If someone in the line should be carried off the field, for example, it will be difficult finding a substitute of equal caliber to send in for him. And Georgetown is in an excellent position to take advantage of any such accidents.

But Dobson isn't figuring on losing. He thinks Maryland will be leading by a slim but sufficient plurality when the final whistle blows, he believes the most important ingredient in its victory will be his boys' spirit.

"Look at those kids out there," he demanded waving his hands at the Marylanders' punting, passing and horsing around before formal practice started. "Just look at that spirit," he continued burying both hands deep in his coat pockets, "isn't it wonderful? They have more spirit than any team I ever coached, and that's half the battle.

"I don't put any pressure on them, don't even try to. I don't believe in making drudgery out of a game, and you can't do it and have a successful team. You've got to let the boys have a good time while drilling them, and it stands to reason they'll respond more rapidly and more efficiently to common-sense coaching more than they will to pleading, cajoling, cursing and swearing.

"Why, do you think I'd get them in a room before a game and tell them to get out there and die for dear old Maryland and get them all steamed up mentally? Not on your life. As long as they're having a little fun, as long as they're content, I know they're going to give the best in them, and that's all any man can ask."

There will be one change in Maryland's starting line-up Saturday, Charley Zulick replacing Ed

Petard Is Held Doped at Bowie

Bowie, Md., Nov. 18.—Peter E. Fitzgerald, trainer of Petard, owned by Mayor Frank Hayes of Waterbury, Conn., appeared in the race secretary's office today and asked permission to scratch the gelding from this afternoon's fifth race, stating that someone had tampered with the thoroughbred during the night.

The gelding's leg filled from cuts received last night.

Petard, a 3-year-old bay gelding, son of Petee Wrack—Superiority, won his last start on November 13 over this track. He whipped Tiempo, Albuquerque, Canpra and eight others. Prior to that he won on October 30 at Laurel against Shot and Shell, Sea Gull and Inferno Lad. Off those two winning efforts, Petard had been installed favorite for today's fifth race.

Michigan's Best Plays Stopped by Ohio State

Columbus, Ohio, Nov. 18 (A.P.).—Michigan's "Old 27," a play that in years past has gained many a yard for the Wolverines in their annual battle with Ohio State, was stopped cold today by the Buckeyes.

Working out against freshmen clad in Michigan blue sweaters, the Bucks' first string not only halted the old favorite but galloped around, over and through the frosh line in practice for Saturday's conflict.

Contract Breach Alleged; Process Server Put Bodily From House.

By the United Press.

New York, Nov. 18.—The Supreme Court of New York today issued a show cause order against Mrs. Eleanor Holm Jarrett, former Olympic backstroke champion, for alleged breach of an agreement to perform for National Swimming Tours, a Boston concern.

Mrs. Jarrett was served with papers to appear before the court next Monday. Swimming Tours, under the promotion of Sam Snyder and Fred Waible, claimed that the swimming star and her former manager, Mark Hanna, had agreed upon a guarantee of $1,250 a week or an option upon 12½ per cent of the gate for a minimum of eight weeks.

The professional organization, through its New York attorney, Charles Segal, filed a bill of complaint alleging substantial monetary damage through Mrs. Jarrett's "sudden change of mind." They claimed that it greatly delayed the tour of several swimming stars and that deletion of Mrs. Jarrett's greatly publicized name in their advertising would be very costly and asked that damages from her—the amount to be determined by the court as in all "bill in equity cases."

Server Tossed Out.

Mrs. Jarrett, whose change of managers was revealed with filing of the case, said that "I have not signed any contract with that organization and I have no intention of giving up my amateur standing." Her new sponsor, Lou Irwin, said that she had signed a contract to appear with her orchestra leader-husband, Art Jarrett, in a song and dance act.

Waible accompanied the process server to the Jarrett home in Kew Gardens this morning to identify Mrs. Jarrett. He said that husband Art became abusive in language and threw the server bodily from the house. Pretty Eleanor, according to Waible, merely stamped her foot and shouted "Go ahead and sue, I don't care."

Ross to Defend Title In Fight With Garcia

New York, Nov. 18 (A.P.).—Sam Pian, manager of Barney Ross, world's welterweight champion, signed an agreement today for Ross to defend the title against Ceferino Garcia, West Coast Filipino, if Ross defeats Izzy Jannazzo, of New York, in their title fight here November 27. The fight would be held within 60 days of the Jannazzo fight if Ross emerges uninjured. Guy Anselmi, Jannazzo's manager, signed a similar agreement.

Gould Given Permission For Bout

Promise to Meet Max Schmeling in June Is Exacted.

Ring Body to Remain 'Neutral' in Matter of Louis Fight.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 18.—An Atlantic City no-decision fight between James J. Braddock and Joe Louis seemed a step nearer reality tonight.

The New York State Athletic Commission, which had been expected to oppose the fight, indicated it would adopt a neutral stand, at its meeting today.

The commission intimated that if Braddock will sign articles to fight Max Schmeling next June and post a $5,000 binder, what he does outside of New York is his own affair.

Called before the boxing solons, presumably to be grilled and possibly spanked, Joe Gould, Braddock's manager, left a half-hour session claiming a victory.

"They as good as told me if I'd sign a contract for Jim to defend his title against Schmeling next June, I can go ahead and arrange some fights," he said. "Why, I'll put that money up right away."

Without referring directly to the Atlantic City venture, Chairman John J. Phelan reminded Gould he had agreed to negotiate for no fights without the sanction of the commission.

Millions for Braddock.

"That's right," replied Gould, pulling a sheaf of letters and telegrams from his pocket. "But here are offers for Braddock's services totaling more than a million dollars. As Braddock's manager, it is my job to consider all such offers. At present I am entertaining one from Herman Taylor for Jim to fight Joe Louis in Atlantic City."

"This commission has nothing to do with Atlantic City," said Phelan. "But we are interested in seeing that you carry out your agreement with us. So we are telling you to do nothing else along these lines until you have completed the Schmeling matter. He has posted his check and signed articles. We would like to cable him Braddock has done likewise."

Garden Only Worry.

The attitude of the commission struck observers as wanting to give Schmeling's interests all possible protection without trying to throw a monkey wrench into the Atlantic City machinery.

If the commission remains neutral, all Gould and the promoters have to worry about is Madison Square Garden, which has Braddock under contract for his first title defense.

Neither side will admit it, but it is believed Mike Jacobs is trying to make a trade with the Garden. If the Eighth avenue arena will not interfere at Atlantic City, Jacobs and Taylor are willing to cut the Garden in for a share of the profits and turn over Louis for Schmeling next June if the Negro should knock out Braddock and thus gain championship recognition.

Leo Walper Goes to Round of 16 With 2 Victories at Pinehurst

By a Staff Correspondent.

Pinehurst, N. C., Nov. 18.—Leo Walper, Washington driving range professor, tonight was the newest topic around the locker rooms and hotels, following his victories over Walter Kozak, of Flushing, Long Island, 5 and 3, and Clarence Hackney, Atlantic City veteran, 2 and 1, in the National P. G. A. championship.

The folks never heard of Walper and wondered what business he had in being among the 16 survivors.

Well, the story is that Leo Walper came to Pinehurst with his wife, also quite a golfer, almost a week before the championship opened, with intentions of winning. When someone would ask him about his Pinehurst, N. C., Nov. 18.—A tidal wave of upsets swept the National P. G. A. golf championship today, engulfing the hopes of the defending titleholder, lanterni-jawed Johnny Revolta; the medalist, Fay Coleman, of Culver City, Calif., and three former P. G. A. rulers—Gene Sarazen, Tommy Armour and Paul Runyan.

Following two hectic and sensational rounds of match play, featured by some of the hottest opening day scoring in history, the No. 2 course tonight was littered with the wreckage of all but three professionals either present or erstwhile holders of a national championship.

Revolta, who opened defense of his match play laurels early this morning, radiating confidence, was ousted early in the afternoon by Harold (Jug) McSpaden, of Boston, on the nineteenth hole, in a heart-breaking battle.

A topped second shot on that first extra hole brought about the champion's downfall, after Revolta in his opening match had played 13 holes in even par to trim Marshall Crichton, of Durham, N. C.

The morning play produced the most violent upsets, Runyan, the little man who triumphed in 1934 at Buffalo, was the first of the big guns to be spiked. A Rochester pro, Clarence Doser, beat him, 2 and 1.

Hardly had spectators recovered from the shock of Runyan's exit from the little picture before they warmed up to a defeat suffered a few minutes later by Tommy Armour, the great Scot, champion in 1930, who bowed to Mortie Dutra, swarthy Spaniard from Detroit, brother of the 1932 titleholder, Olin, by a count of 4 and 3.

Tommy, his cap pulled far down over his brow, in disgust, lost to a man who played par golf for 13 holes.

And Then Sarazen.

Then came the defeat of Sarazen, three-time winner, and always dangerous in these shows. The stocky Italian shotmaker was put out by one Jack Patroni, of Shawnee, Pa., 1 up, despite Sarazen's gallant eleventh-hour comeback.

Of the 16 survivors who will swing into the third round 36-hole battles tomorrow, only one of 'em is without a national reputation. He is a determined young man from Washington, D. C., Leo Walper, who operates a driving range in Bethesda just over the District border line.

They call him the walloping Walper, and never did a golfer live up to his name more than the District professional did today. Walper played 32 holes in one over par figures, which is beautiful golf, though it didn't compare with the kind put out by some of the others—notably, Denny Shute, the former British open champion, who was six under par in defeating a Mr. Al Zimmerman, of Portland, Oreg., 3 and 2.

Walper defeated Walter Kozak, of

You can Live 11 more years than your Father!

The average American's life-span has increased by 11 years since 1900. But these extra years are not a gift—you can earn and enjoy them only by sensible, moderate living. Rest. Relax oftener. Watch what you eat. And, if you drink, choose a whiskey that AGREES with you.

"Find out for us how the human system responds to different forms of whiskey—give us your impartial verdict," said the House of Seagram last Spring to a thoroughly equipped group of research men.

Their answer came after months of fact-finding effort. It proved Seagram's Crown Whiskies, blended the special Seagram way, to be the form of whiskey most likely to agree with the average, moderate man.

Seagram's Crowns, already enjoyed by millions for their fine, rich taste, were thus given the highest possible rating for kindness as "a most wholesome form of whiskey."

Therefore, in seeking fine-tasting, kind whiskey, follow this guide to whiskey-kindness which has already rewarded so many sensible men. Choose Seagram's Crowns. Ask for either of them at the bar. Serve them regularly at home.

Whitney's Piccolo Captures Sprint Handicap at Bowie Track

Stretch Drive Overtakes Night Play

Miss Monoa Is Nosed Out for Place in Photo Decision.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Bowie, Md., Nov. 18.—C. V. Whitney's Piccolo, believed to be only a distance runner, sprinted to victory today in the Tyaskin Handicap, a Class C claiming race, over the 6-furlong course. The popular jockey, Ira Hanford, was in the saddle and he paced the Whichone colt to a drive through the stretch that could not be denied. Piccolo took the decision by half a length from the Bomar Stable's Night Play, with Miss Monoa beaten out for the place in a camera finish.

Despite the short route, Piccolo was well played in winning his fifth race of the year, paying an $8.40 mutuel. His time of 1:13 4-5 was nothing to brag about, but was better than average for the class of horses over this slow track.

Racing conditions were never better at this Prince Georges County oval and a crowd of 8,000 watched the sport.

Piccolo was not prominent during the early stages of the race. Miss Monoa, Princess Athene and Night Play staged a keen battle for pace-setting honors as Piccolo was finding his racing legs far back, having only Evergold beaten at the far turn.

Piccolo Bounces In.

In the stretch, 'Night Play was winning a duel with Miss Monoa when Piccolo came "out of the clouds." Hanford plied a punishing whip and Piccolo bounded along to catch the leaders, and then drew out on his rivals.

Hard Chase and Jockey Eddie Smith, a Charles Town combination, took a nose decision from Flower Time, with Apprentice Vassar up, in the first race. The camera was used to separate them. Ranicilla was third in the field of nine very cheap ones competing over the mile and a sixteenth course. Hard Chase paid a $12.80 mutuel and was ten seconds off the track record. The race was a two-horse affair from start to finish.

The favorite players benefited from the second camera finish of the afternoon when Clamorous took the decision from Jackie D. and Rockwood after a 6-furlong sprint. Jockey M. Peters gave the winner a powerful ride and brought the daughter of Teddy from far back in the field. Jackie D., however, was farther out of it than Clamorous and would have been the winner in another jump. The winner paid $4.80.

My Kin Easy Winner.

My Kin, owned by Leo J. Marks, proved an easy winner of the third race over the sprint course. In charge of Ira Hanford, the Misstep filly came to the outside entering the stretch and bounced far out to be taken in hand while finishing five lengths in advance of Joyride. Third money, in the field of eight, went to Patsy Begone.

Jockey Johnny Bejshak made his debut as a trainer and owner by riding his Saracen out of the money. However, the colt was unprepared for the break and had little or no chance. My Kin paid a $12.90 mutuel.

Minton, from the Shandon Farm, proved a worthy favorite in the fifth race, defeating a field of seven, contesting at a mile and a sixteenth. Inferno Lad was second and Mad Frump third. Little Argo and Albuquerque ran themselves into submission battling for the pace. Minpaid a $5.10 mutuel.

The sixth went to Ross in the role of odds-on favorite. The Sun Flag gelding was much the best and took command early in the stretch to win with daylight to spare. Witte-kind, a long shot which led most of the way, was second, and Legender was third. The winner brought a return of $3.40.

The day's finale went to Tiempo at a $4.50 mutuel.

WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1936.
WEATHER, CLEAR. TRACK, FAST.

FIRST RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 1:34. Off at 1:35½. Winner, Mrs. J. R. Elliott's br. f. (4), by Purchase—Hardy Fern. Trained by J. Wilson. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:25 1-5, 0:50 1-5, 1:17, 1:46, 1:54 1-5.

KHELABOO	(Boucher)	114	4	8	9	9	9	9	9	136.90

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HARD CHASE, $12.80, $4.10, $3.80; FLOWER TIME, $2.80, $2.30; RANICILLA, $11.90.

HARD CHASE, rated along when FLOWER TIME was sent to the front on the swing for the backstretch, came up on the outside of the pace setter approaching the far turn, took a brief lead and then hung on well under energetic handling. FLOWER TIME was rushed to take command in the first quarter and fought it out with excellent courage in the final drive and just missed. RANICILLA rallied to punishment to close with a rush in the late stretch. STAR SPECIAL gained some ground on the swing for the stretch and then hung. EBON ZE showed a good effort. JACAMAR had early speed. The others were always outrun.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 2-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:06. Off at 2:06. Winner, H. W. Jackson's b. f. (2), by Tedd—Clamor. Trained by G. C. Winfrey. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:48, 1:14 4-5.

LADY DAY	(R. Watson)	113	3	1	1½	4½	7	7	7	31.40

Two-dollar mutuels paid—CLAMOROUS, $4.80, $2.80, $2.30; JACKIE D., $3.90, $3.00; ROCKWOOD, $3.20.

CLAMOROUS moved up on the outside with a rush leaving the backstretch, took command midway of the stretch and barely lasted over JACKIE D., while kept to a stern drive. JACKIE D., lacking early speed and a distant trailer to the stretch, closed with a belated rush and would have won in another stride. ROCKWOOD saved ground along the rail entering the stretch and closed willingly. ALEXANDRINE dropped out of it entering the stretch. MALEMAN stopped. ROYAL RANK had early speed. LADY DAY tired after setting the pace for a quarter.

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good for all but Saracen from stall gates. Won handily; place same. Went to post at 2:36½. Off at 2:39. Winner, L. J. Marks' ch. f. (3), by Misstep—Kindred. Trained by M. Lowenstein. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 2-5, 0:48, 1:14 1-5.

OLE MISTIS	(E. Smith)	111	8	6	8	8	8	8	8	112.70

Two-dollar mutuel paid—MY KIN, $12.90, $6.30, $4.10; JOYRIDE, $5.00, $3.20; PATSEY BEGONE, $5.00.

MY KIN, prominent from the start, circled the leaders entering the stretch to take command, drew far out and was being taken in hand at the end. JOYRIDE forced to the front in the dash to the far turn, drew out on PATSEY BEGONE, but was no match for the winner, but was easily second. PATSEY BEGONE had high early speed and continued gamely throughout. JOHNNYCAKE tired at the end after racing forwardly. SARACEN was backing through the gate when the break came. TOBY TYLER had no excuses. BUSBY and OLD MISTIS were always outrun.

(DAILY DOUBLE PAID $63.50.)

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000 added. The Tyaskin Handicap. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:06½. Off at 3:09. Winner, C. V. Whitney's b. c. (3), by Whichone—Piccoline. Trained by T. J. Healey. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:23 3-5, 0:47 4-5, 1:13 4-5.

EARL PORTER	(C. Hanford)	107	8	1	4³	4½	6¹	7²	7²	12.45
EVERGOLD	(Westrope)	114	3	6	8	8	8	8	8	10.65

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PICCOLO, $8.40, $3.90, $3.50; NIGHT PLAY, $3.70, $2.80; MISS MONOA, $8.70.

PICCOLO, lacking early speed, was forced to go wide for racing room, rallied to punishment midway of the stretch and closed with a belated rush to win going away. NIGHT ULAY, steadied along with the pacemakers on the outside, took command midway of the stretch and closed willingly, but unable to resist the winner. MISS MONOA raced PRINCESS ATHENE into defeat and was tiring gradually through the stretch. STOCKS moved up menacingly in the early stretch and closed with good energy. SOME GOOD went evenly. PRINCESS ATHENE was weakly handled. EARL PORTER outbroke his field and went well for three-eighths. EVERGOLD ran out at the far turn and was a trailer throughout.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place same. Went to post at 3:37½. Off at 3:38. Winner, Shandon Farm's b. g. (7), by Angon—Mintdrop. Trained by J. J. Greeley. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:25 1-5, 0:51 1-5, 1:16 2-5, 1:43 2-5, 1:51 1-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Straight
MINTON	(Westrope)	117	1	1	4³	3²	2²	2¹	1½	$1.55

LITTLE ARGO	(E. Smith)	110	6	2	1¹	1½	1½	1½	5½	20.55
HIGHEST POINT	(Peters)	112	3	6	5³	4½	5⁵	4²	6¹⁰	12.35
SCOTTY DON	(Tryon)	112	7	4	3½	6²	7	7	7	140.75

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MINTON, $5.10, $2.90, $2.50; INFERNO LAD, $3.70, $3.10; MAD FRUMP, $4.30.

MINTON, within striking distance of the leaders from the beginning, came willingly when placed to drive and held INFERNO LAD safe in the closing stages. INFERNO LAD ran wide at the first turn, gained steadily thereafter, and hung after reaching contention. MAD FRUMP was allowed to drop far out of it and came with a rush in the stretch. ALBUQUERQUE was used up chasing LITTLE ARGO and tired. LITTLE ARGO stopped after leading to the stretch. HIGHEST POINT had speed in spots. SCOTTY DON had early speed.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-half miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 4:05½. Off at 4:06. Winner, Mrs. N. E. Doyle's br. g. (4), by Sun Flag—Gotta Gonow. Trained by W. Durnan. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:26 1-5, 0:51 4-5, 1:19 3-5, 1:46, 2:13 3-5, 2:42 2-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Straight
ROSS	(R. Watson)	116	5	3	4³	3nk	4¹²	1nk	1¹	$0.70
WITTEKIND	(E. Smith)	111½	2	1	1¹	1½	2½	2²	2nk	17.25

ADA CRUZ	(Toot)	106	6	5	5½	6	6	6	6	42.35

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ROSS, $3.40, $3.10, $2.80; WITTEKIND, $9.00, $4.70; LEGENDER, $6.40.

ROSS, much the best, was steadied along for a mile, took command at rider's will and won jogging at the end. WITTEKIND went to the front at the break, was well handled throughout and hung on well, but no match for the winner. LEGENDER followed the pace most of the way and closed willingly. DEARZIN went to the front with a bold rush nearing the stretch and tired gradually thereafter. BOSSIE EYE made up some ground in the late stages. ADA CRUZ was always outrun.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-half miles. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place driving. Went to post at 4:33½. Off at 4:34. Winner, Mrs. H. M. Pearson's br. m. (7), by Lucky Hour—Daisy Carter. Trained by H. Young. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 0:25 1-5, 0:50 4-5, 1:18, 1:44, 2:11 3-5, 2:40 3-5.

Horses	Jockeys	Wgt.	Post	St.	¼	½	¾	Str.	Fin.	Straight

PORPHYRY	(DeCamillis)	110	7	7	6½	7	7	7	7	36.35

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TIEMPO, $4.50, $2.80, $2.50; MARIATO, $5.60, $4.50; IRISH VOTE, $4.00.

TIEMPO opened a good lead at once, was steadied along in front, rallied when shaken up midway of the stretch and easily drew out at the finish. MARIATO came up on the outside to take the lead briefly entering the stretch, but could not resist the winner. IRISH VOTE rallied midway and was placed to punishment and closed willingly. DONA DULCIN was hard ridden throughout and had no excuses. EUDES moved to contention after a quarter but tired. The others were outrun.

Time Out!

By Chet Smith

At the Post . . .

with Bill Bennings.

Bowie, Md., Nov. 18, 1936.

Dear Al:

J. Yancey Christmas, of the Marlboro, Md., Christmases, was not such a happy man today. He is the owner of the brilliant 2-year-old Rough Time. A few weeks ago, Christmas refused an offer of $5,000 for the colt. He smiled and kept the colt in his barn. After seeing Rough Time in action at Pimlico, Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt offered Christmas $10,000. Again Christmas decided to take his chances with the juvenile. This morning Rough Time was out on the track for a workout and bled. Of course, this does not mean that the colt will never race again. Some horses bleed and then recover. However, it certainly makes his future a gamble. I hope Rough Time is not seriously affected. He seemed headed for the big 3-year-old stakes next season. If you are looking for a long shot tomorrow you are offered a maiden named Escopette. This horse has been to the post 46 times this year and has yet to win a race. Mrs. J. V. Stewart's Sallandry was scratched out of the fifth race today due to a case of colic. Mike has been ailing for the past few days. Looks as though I will have to call in the veterinarian for him. Jockey Eddie Smith reports that he's in top shape and rarin' to ride at the coming Charles Town meeting. The riders weighed me on the official scales before the first race today and decided that I could ride an entry. The man in charge of the running time knows his horses. When the cheap field went to the post, he put up a 1 and a 5, indicating that he believed the time would be over 1:50 despite the fact that the track record is 1:44 1-5 for the route. He was right, Hard Chase won it in 1:54 1-5.

BILL.

First race—True Tune must carry a load to the post in 119 pounds, but seems to have an edge over this field. Has worked well over this track and I have no reason to believe tomorrow is the day. Danarco is a good one and won at Laurel. Bugle Ann is a fair sort and should be no worse than third. Miss Leannah is a paddock tip.

Second race—Bellum met with a lot of interference in a recent race that should have brought a victory. Clear sailing tomorrow will find this one taking a set of brackets, I do believe. Miney Myerson's last can be put in a sack and tossed overboard. Dancing Doll to take care of the others.

Third race—Clingendaal gets the call here despite that heavy weight assignment. Needs only a hustling ride to take the main award. Carnarvon was a consistent one in New England and should go well. Careful Miss won her last impressively and is dangerous.

Fourth race—Kenty probably will like this slow track and has been working kindly. May take the purse at good odds. Kimpton is fit and ready and has nice races in the book. Babwrack has failed on numerous occasions, but should improve over the soft oval.

Fifth race—Billy Bee seems to have an edge over this field. The Bomar Stable horse should not be bothered by the weight and is likely to make every post a winning one. Aneroid can improve that last and is dangerous. Wha Hae to take care of the others.

Sixth race—Nightcap and Apprentice promise to battle it out for the main award in this field. Both are at tops now. South Bend has a habit of popping with a good effort now and then and may need attention.

Seventh race—Wise Will may improve with a change of riders. I'm tossing that last out. Droll Story has had many chances but I'm going to give him second here. Canpra for the show end.

1—Danarco, Miss Leannah, Justa Town.
2—Elwawa, My Surprise, Dancing Doll.
3—Careful Miss, Duel, The Runner.
4—Passing Eve, Kimpton, Kenty.
5—Wha Hae, Marching Home, Aneroid.
6—Apprentice, Nightcap, Speed.
7—Strophe, Quiet Please, Ironbound.
Best bet—Careful Miss.
—Clocker Mike.

Mt. Rainier Court Practice Begins

With soccer togs tucked away, Mount Rainier High School athletes turned their attention to basketball yesterday at the District Line school as 50 boys responded for the first practice session. Of these, 20 will be trying for the varsity, while 30 will be attempting to make the junior squad.

Coach Perry Wilkinson, who has been at Mount Rainier since the opening of that Prince Georges County institution and during that time has seen his basketballers win 91 out of 108 games with Maryland schools, has plenty of worry and work to mold a formidable machine this year.

With only two lettermen returning, neither of which was a regular out of a squad of ten, the outlook is anything but bright. Using George Taylor and Edgar Shinn as a nucleus, however, the coach intends to give the other interscholastic clubs a hard run for the county championship.

Others hoping to gain a berth on the first team are Herbert Reed, Kenneth Taylor, Mark Skinner, Gregory O'Conner, Harry Wynn, Willard Babcock, Harry Rolfes, Richard Klopher, Leonard Hendry, Lawernce Lauk, Ted Stell, Alfred Chroinger, Frank Landolt, Harold Brown, Bartlett Dorr, Douglas Wilson, Latimer Miller, Leroy Reed and Joseph Hysan.

Western Maryland's Aerials to Hit Cards in Vulnerable Spot

Air Defense Poor Despite Long Drills

Terrors Expert at Game; C. U.'s Hopes Lie in Running Attack.

It will be Catholic University's running attack against Western Maryland's vaunted passing game Saturday when the teams meet at Brookland in what will be the Cardinal's final contest of the season, and if the Terrors live up to advance notices they'll pass the Bergman boys into the ground.

Catholic is particularly vulnerable in this phase of defense, a fact borne out by the record's mute testimony. Mississippi scored both touchdowns in this manner in chalking up a 14-0 victory over Catholic—the Cards' first loss of the year. Prior to this La Salle and De Paul had gone into the ozone for scores on the local team, and as late as last week North Carolina State utilized this avenue to the goal line.

Although Coach "Dutch" Bergman has devoted an unusual amount of practice time to correcting this fault, his work thus far has not produced results. Catholic's secondary has an uncanny knack for getting maneuvered out of position on pass plays even against teams of mediocre ability in this line of play. Against Western Maryland, an expert passing aggregation, it may be murderous.

The Terrors boast a trio of the finest ends ever seen around the vicinity in Benjamin, Lathrop and Westerville. They're all big, rangy men with shovel-like hands particularly adapte' to pass receiving. 'Sunshine" Campbell, a southpaw, is on the dispatching end and the quartet can assure any rival coach of 60 minutes of misery on any given afternoon.

Walper Advances In P. G. A. Tourney

chances, Walper always replied, "I'm gonna win it."

Walper has made good part of his boast. If he gets by Jug McSpaden, Revolta's conqueror, the Washingtonian may justify his confidence.

There isn't a golfer in the field who hits a ball straighter and with more zip than the walloping Walper. He lost only one hole to Kozak, the third, and against Hackney he staged a sprited rally after being 2 down with eight holes to go. Hackney fired an outgoing 36 to Walper's 37 to lead 1 up at the turn, and the veteran got a birdie on the tenth. Then Walper relaxed a bit, birdied the eleventh, and played the next six holes in 1 under 4s for victory.

Bobby Cruickshank, Richmond's dynamic little pro, also joined Walper in upholding the Middle Atlantic prestige, the two having qualified together in Richmond. Ralph Beach, of Baltimore, was eliminated, losing in the morning to Willie Klein, veteran New York pro, 2 and 1. Cruickshank bounced out Mat Kowall, of New York, 4 and 3, and played 17 holes in even par, to beat Erie Ball, of Atlanta, 2 and 1.

Colonial Frosh Beat N. J. Team

By the Associated Press.

Penns Grove, N. J., Nov. 18.—The freshman football eleven of George Washington University defeated the Penns Grove Y. M. C. A. Cubs, 14 to 0, in a game under the lights tonight.

The Colonial yearlings scored in the second and fourth quarters.

Czajka, substitute left halfback for the Washington team, tallied the first score following a blocked kick, while Noonan climaxed a sustained drive from midfield by crossing the Penns Grove line in the waning minutes of the game.

Nowsky, a substitute left end, notched both extra points after touchdown by placements.

Portney Suspended For Dodging Furr Bout

The National Boxing Association has suspended Jack Portney, Baltimore welterweight, indefinitely for his failure to go through with a scheduled 20-round bout against Phil Furr here. The suspension was imposed at the request of the District Boxing Commission, which is affiliated with the N. B. A.

Al Dintamin, local bantamweight, has been set down by the national organization for 90 days for reporting out of condition for a recent bout here.

Merry Marylanders Show Little Concern Over Georgetown Game

Dobson Sees Terp Victory Over G.U.

Fletcher, who is ailing, at tackle. The rest of the team will be comprised of the same "iron men" who have started all previous games, Willis and Smith, ends; Birkland and Zulick, tackles; Surgent and Wolfe, guards; DeArmey, center; Ellinger, quarter; Guckeyson and Gormley, halfbacks, and Meade, fullback.

Hoyas Revamp Lineup; Keegin, Williams Start

For the second consecutive day Georgetown's already bruised squad was sent through a long scrimmage as Coach Jack Hagerty tried to perfect his attack, embracing a bevy of new plays, for the big game. But the real news emanating from the Hilltop is that Joe Williams, 155-pound end, and Joe Keegin, a genuine home-grown halfback, will break into the starting line-up.

Keegin takes Tony Barabas' place behind the line and Williams is pinch-hitting—and brother, he hits hard with that 155 pounds—for Maury Nee, who isn't in the best physical condition.

Keegin earned his starting position by a stellar performance against Manhattan last week, getting away on a couple of pretty runs for sizable gains in addition to performing brilliantly on the defense. He would have been on the first 11 weeks ago but for an injured hip which not only handicapped him but completely prevented him from running. He also will be a valuable man to help stop Maryland's vaunted passing attack as he is one of the few tall men in the backfield.

Hagerty calls Williams his 155-pound all-American, and Manhattan probably agrees with him, for Joe smeared three Jasper huskies, including the ball carrier, in a perfect defensive play. Possessing a world of courage and aggressiveness, Williams would be playing regularly but for his lack of heft. Then, of course, there is Maury Nee, a right fair gridmen in his own right.

Colored Ringmen In Tourney Tonight

Amateur colored boxers will have their day—or daze—in a tournament which opens at the Twelfth Street Y. M. C. A. tonight. The winners will be sent to New York to compete in the all-American tourney beginning November 27.

Besides local boxers, CCC Camp, No. 335, will be represented by Albert Spencer, 135-pound class; James Walker, 150 pounds, and James Taylor, light-heavyweight. CCC Camp, No. 1316, Brandywine, Md., will have one entry—James Johnston, 155-pounder.

Ernest Hayes, Capital Pleasure Club, and William Knight, of the Y. M. C. A., are generally expected to be the ones to reach the finals in the heavyweight division.

Sharkey Manager Gets Jail Term for Assault

Boston, Nov. 18 (U.P.).—Johnny Buckley, manager of former Heavyweight Champion Jack Sharkey, was given a two-month jail sentence today after being convicted by Municipal Judge Elisha Adlow on a charge of assaulting a onetime lightweight boxer with a bottle.

Buckley appealed the sentence and was released on personal recognizance.

Charges grew out of an alleged altercation between Buckley and Joseph Dow, former lightweight boxer, at a downtown gymnasium November 4.

Neusel Beats Foord.

London, Nov. 18 (U.P.).—Walter Neusel of Germany tonight scored a tremendous upset by outpointing British Heavyweight Champion Ben Foord of South Africa in a 15-round fight at Harringway Stadium. Neusel weighed 213½, Foord 214.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich.

Steeplechase and cross-country racing, America's take-off on Old England, suffered the loss of one of its outstanding figures yesterday in the death of 28-year-old Noel Laing in a Washington hospital.

The young Virginian, virtually teethed on a saddlehorn down in the Rappahannock country, was one of that small coterie of gentleman riders who dared death in the saddle for the sport of it, yet could outstrip the professional steeplechase riders.

POVICH.

America was never able to develop among its professional jockeys a rider who could hold his own with those young men of family and wealth, who counted their horsemanship as something akin to culture and fully as necessary. Multimillionaire Pete Bostwick, perhaps America's greatest steeplechase rider, is one of that group. Rigan McKinney and Jack Skinner are others. Former Congressman James Simpson was another top-ranking rider. None among the paid riders can compare with these young men of independent means.

Even at the last Pimlico meeting, one of the last outposts of steeplechase racing on the public tracks, the presence of Mr. McKinney astride an entry sent the odds on the mount tumbling. Pete Bostwick in the saddle had the same effect. The betting public had come to recognize these gentlemen riders as a far safer risk than even the best of the professional clan.

That cross-country and steeplechase racing is perhaps the most dangerous of American sports has not deterred these young scions of wealth and family from entering competition with the men who have made of the sport a means of livelihood. Saddlecloth to saddlecloth they ride with the professionals, risking life and limb for the satisfaction of getting the best out of their mounts, for none among these gentleman riders is permitted to accept a fee.

Undeterred they have been, too, by the sordidly materialistic prerace preparations which find the track ambulance and the dead-horse wagon waiting in the infield to cart away the unfortunates, men and riders, who may have failed by the fraction of an inch to take one of the jumps cleanly.

With a philosophy akin to "C'est la guerre," these gentleman jocks, riding not for gain but for glory, dismiss the tragedies of their calling. Thus it is that today Jack Skinner, like Laing, from the Virginia horse country, is more active in the saddle than he was a few years ago when his brother tumbled to his death beneath the hooves of a falling thoroughbred in a hunt meet.

And thus it is that with the native courage these gentleman riders must possess, Rigan McKinney has forged to the forefront among amateur riders, even though he has suffered broken bones in a half-dozen spills from errant mounts. Three times in his career he was aided to his feet after a spill by the same photographer whom a New York daily had assigned to the steeplechase races.

One slight concession is made to these "gentleman jocks" in their competition with the paid clan and that embodies only a social note. The prefix "Mr." precedes their names on the official programs, in pursuance of an old English custom that distinguishes amateur riders from the professionals, but once the field is away social distinctions are lost in the shuffle. It's rider vs. rider and woe to him who misjudges the height of a hurdle or the width of a water jump.

Sports writing is given to superlatives. The pitcher who fans a batter with the bases full is forthwith stamped as a performer of raw courage. The golfer who comes from behind to win is supposed to have something of gallantry in him. The tennis player who takes a thrilling match owes it to his valiance, no less. But——

Picture the steeplechase rider astride a high-strung thoroughbred bearing down upon a young forest, laughingly called a hedge, with flying hooves flanking him to the right and left, menacing him in front and behind and picture also one too-eager jerk of the reins, one false step by his mount that would mean disaster—perhaps death—and courage is, indeed, a passenger in the race.

Racing, they say, improves the breed—of horses, yes, and men.

Pittsburgh Is Invited To Play Orange Bowl

Pittsburgh, Nov. 18 (AP).—Jock Sutherland called his University of Pittsburgh Panthers back to practice today for their Thanksgiving finale with Carnegie Tech while officials studied the prospect of a post season "Bowl" game.

An announcement in Miami, Fla., that the Panthers had been invited to represent the North in the Orange Bowl brought an answer from Pitt officials that no formal bid had yet been received.

Sutherland used Arnold Greene, a substitute who starred at fullback against Nebraska, with the regulars in the "dummy" drill against Tech formations today.

Haynes Flattens Abe Feldman in 2d

New York, Nov. 18 (AP).—Leroy Haynes, Philadelpiha Negro heavyweight, made short work of the Brooklyn veteran, Abe Feldman, tonight. Haynes scored a knockout in the second round of their ten-rounder in the Hippodrome.

Haynes scaled 199¾ and Feldman 180¼. Haynes surprised the small gallery of 3,000 by flooring the rugged Feldman, rated tops as a heavyweight trial horse, four times before Referee Al Reich stopped the fight and waved the Brooklyn boy to his corner. The end came after 1:41 of the second round had elapsed.

It was the first time Feldman had been knocked off his feet in five years of ring campaigning.

C. U. Frosh Meet Terror Yearlings

The final game of the season for the Catholic U. freshman football team is slated for the C. U. Stadium Saturday morning at 10:30 o'clock, when it will play the Western Maryland frosh outfit in a preliminary battle to the varsity tilt. The game is open to the public.

Boasting several prep and high school stars in its line-up the team is undefeated to date, having trounced Archmere Academy by the score of 34-7, thus smashing a three-year record set up by the Delaware eleven; and Staunton Military Academy at Staunton earlier in the season.

Among the former schoolboy stars in the line-up are Joe Guyon, son of the former Carlisle Indian and Georgia Tech all-American; "Utah" Aguirre, sterling end from the Rocky Mounatin scholastic conference; the Perro brothers, a pair of husky tackles, who hail from the same district as that of Irish Carroll; and Nick Saralas, the pile-driving fullback, who in addition to playing great football for the Cardinal yearlings this season, is the national interscholastic javelin tosser.

Rosslyn Girls Finally Lose Pin Set

District Leaderoinffinffinffi District League Leaders in Two Games.

After running roughshod over all opponents in the Ladies District League for six consecutive weeks, during which time they had only tasted defeat but once, the champion Rosslyn team lost its first set of the season last night, bowing in two games before the superior efforts of the Temple aggregation.

Mildred Miskelly ignited the spark which spelled defeat for the champions, rolling a 139 game and 371 set. Virginia Calvagno contributed a 353 set which also figured greatly towards Rosslyn't downfall.

Temple outscored Rosslyn, 1,693 to 1,694, being extended to roll-off before annexing the match game.

National Beer, led by Lucille Young's 145 game and 368 set whitewashed the R. E. A. Cleaners to pull up into a tie with Lucky Strike for the runner-up position. Lucky Strike was forced to yield its undisputed possession to the No. 2 position, losing a game to Highway Engineers.

Georgia Hays collected a 353 set in Georgetown's odd game decision over Convention Hall, and Arcadia bumped Swanee twice.

Bowling foul judges will be banded together into a local organization, if the hopes of those who are urging the formation of such an organization are realized at a meeting to be held Sunday afternoon.

All foul line judges have been requested to be present at the meeting, which will be held at the New Colonial Hotel at 4 o'clock. The organization will be allied with the Washington City Duckpin Association and National Duckpin Congress.

The feature match of the District League is on tap tonight at the Convention Hall alleys, where the leadng Washington Brewery team locks horns with Occidental Restaurant, foremost challengers for the loop leadership. Three wins will put Occidental at the top of the heap.

Medalist, 4 Golfing Greats Bow, Walper Wins in P.G.A. Tourney

Flushing, Long Island, 5 and 3, in the morning, being only one over par for the 15 holes. In the afternoon he met up with the veteran trouper, Clarence Hackney, of Atlantic City, and scored a distinct upset by winning, 2 and 1, after being two down going to the eleventh. Against Hackney Walper walloped the ball around in even par, covering the last eight holes in one under par.

But Mr. Walper, who finished four shots behind the medalist, Coleman, with a 73, 74—147, faces the acid test tomorrow. His opponent will be none other than Jug McSpaden, hero of the 1934 C ast-to-Coast tournaments, who knocked the crown from Revolta's head today.

McSpaden had only a 150 in his qualifying round, but he was one under for his two matches today, shooting an outgoing 33 against Joe Belfore, his morning victim.

Three Titlists Left.

There are plenty around here, pros, too, who think Walper will win. They point to the fact that he has been consistent from the very start. He has played 68 holes in only four over par, golf not all of the other 15 survivors can brag about.

Besides the "shooting Shute," there are two other titled golfers left. Tony Manero, the transplanted New Yorker, who happens to be National Open champion, is one of 'em. The other is Billy Burke, he of the unorthodox swing, 1931 Open ruler.

Manero flirted with defeat in his morning match with Jim Demaret, of Houston, finally winning on the twenty-third hole. Poosh-'em-up Tony made a story-book finish. Coming to the eighteenth one down to the Texan, the Open champion trundled in a spectacular 2-foot putt for a birdie three, to prolong the battle, and on the fifth extra hole scored a birdie four to win.

In his second match Manero blasted out Mortie Dutra, 6 and 5, with a two-under par performance.

Picard Triumphs.

Burke trimmed Francis Gallett, of Milwaukee, one up, a close call, but turned on the heat against Ky Laffoon, of Chicago, winning 4 and 3, being two under par when he plunked in a 40-footer for a deuce to climax the match on the fifteenth.

Three Ryder Cup stars are left—Henry Picard, of Hershey, who is still the favorite; Horton Smith and Craig Wood.

Picard was pressed to the limit in his first match, being forced to shoot a 69 before eliminating Leo Mallory, 2 up. He just went to town against Al Kreuger, the Beloit, Wis., star, being four under when he closed out Kreuger on the fourteenth green, 5 and 4. Thus for the day Picard was seven under par.

Other Winners.

Smith got by with a 1-up victory over Jack Forrester, the veteran, and went on a putting spree in the nightcap duel with Patroni, having eight 1-putt greens to win, 6 and 5.

Wood, once a P. G. A. finalist, eliminated Frank Walsh in the second round, 1 up, after a battle of birdies and eagles.

Other survivors were Jimmy Thomson, Harry Cooper, Bobby Cruickshank, Willie Goggin, "Wild Bill" Mehlhorn, Ed Dudley, Jimmy Hines and Vic Ghezzi, all name figures in golf.

Ghezzi put the works to Fay Coleman in the afternoon, winning 1 up. Mr. Coleman in the morning had to get a deuce on the fifteenth to remove Ben Richter, the left-handed pro.

Mehlhorn, wearing a sombrero, hit a magnificient spoon second on the twenty-third hole late this evening for a birdie four to defeat Dick Metz, handsome Chicagoan.

FIRST ROUND.

Ernie Ball, Mobile, Ala., defeated Ralph Stonehouse, Indianapolis, 1 up, 19 holes.

Jack Patroni, Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., defeated Gene Sarazen, Brookfield Center, Conn., 1 up.

Profit Taking Drops Grains From NewTops

Early Advance Carries Corn to Highest Price Since 1927.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, Nov. 18.—Big profit-taking sales rolled grain prices abruptly downhill late today after corn, wheat, rye and soy beans had climbed earlier to steep new top records.

Net losses for the day were general throughout the grain list, with corn off the market sharply at the last, 1¼ cents a bushel in some cases, although the corn market previously had led advances and at one stage was up 2 cents overnight to a peak unequaled since 1927.

Corn closed nervous at the same as yesterday's finish to 1⅛ cents lower, December 105⅝@105⅞, May new 98⅜@98¾, July 94⅞@95¼; wheat irregular, ⅞ off to ⅜ up, December 117⅛@117⅝, May 115@115⅛, July 102½@102¾; oats unchanged to ⅝ down, December 44⅞@45, and rye unchanged to ⅜ higher, December 93⅞. The provisions outcome was unchanged to 5 cents dearer.

Dictograph Stock Suspended by Curb

New York, Nov. 18.—(AP).—The New York Curb Exchange today ordered suspension of dealings in the capital stock of Dictograph Products Co., Inc. The action was taken on recommendation of the exchange's committee on unlisted trading "due to the condition of the market in the stock."

The curb exchange issued the following statement:

"A condition developed this morning on the floor of the New York Curb Exchange in Dictograph Products Co., Inc., stock where it was believed that the market would not absorb selling orders without demoralization. It was felt, accordingly, in the interest of the public and of investors, that trading in the stock should be suspended pending further investigation."

Before the suspension the stock had declined from $23 to $19.50. Yesterday it was traded within a range of $26.50-$24, closing at $25. The 1936 high was $35 and the low $5.87. In the final hour of trading in the curb market the stock was quoted $5.50 lower than the previous close, at $19.50 a share.

The company specializes in the manufacture of sound transmitting devices. Its plant is in New York.

Steel Industry Expects Early Price Advance

Indications Are That New Figures Will Be $2 to $4 Higher.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 18.—The steel industry is awaiting announcements from one of the larger producers that will set the pace for price advances expected for first-quarter business, Iron Age said today.

"Latest indications are that the new prices will be $2 higher on semifinished, $3 on bars, shapes and plates and either $3 or $4 on sheets and strip," the weekly review said.

"Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corporation yesterday announced a change in tinplate prices, effective January 1, to $4.85 per base box, Pittsburgh, and $4.95, Gary, and the discontinuance of the 7½ per cent discount which became general under the NRA steel code.

"Mills are not encouraging speculative buying, and there has been comparatively little effort in that direction among buyers except in sheets, in which most mills have little or no tonnage available for shipment during the remainder of the quarter.

"In finished steel products other than sheets there are some open schedules over the remaining weeks of the year, as backlogs have recently been reduced. In plates and structural shapes the decline has been quite marked. Tin-plate production has declined from 93 to 89 per cent.

"Steel ingot output is subject to fluctuations, being slightly higher at Chicago and lower at Pittsburgh, Youngstown and Lorain. For the country as a whole it is estimated at 74 per cent for this week."

$389,922,734 Issues Are Filed With SEC

Stocks Lose Early Driving Power but Gains Exceed Losses at Close; Bonds Higher.

New York, Nov. 18.—Stocks ran into enough selling to make the brakes squeak, but moderate price gains exceeded the losses at the close of a fairly active day, with the turnover failing to reach 3,000,000 shares. Bonds were strong. Dollars weakened a little against francs and sterling. December wheat closed ¾ of a cent down at 117½ cents a bushel.

Stock trading began with a rush that exceeded the running start of yesterday. Turnover in the first hour was nearly 900,000 shares and many stocks opened on sale blocks of 2,000 and 10,000 shares, Radio being the leader. Prices climbed from 1 to 3 points before any appreciable sales for profits by the short-term traders took place. When the advances halted, the activity fell, and the greater part of the afternoon was spent in moderate dealings without much change in price.

Price Inflation.

Demand for most stocks continued good enough to prevent any bad breaks. Long-distance considerations, such as possible action to draw in credit lines through a lifting in margin requirements, increasing the reserve ratio of the banks, or a change in tax laws to end the dividend windfall and possibly to promote profit-taking by large stock market investors, may have increased caution. On the other hand, the trade news continued favorable. The steel industry midweek reviews were cheering, the reports on railroad traffic and electrical power production continued to show gains, and larger consumption was reported in the metal trades, the rubber trade and petroleum.

It may be that a good deal of forehanded buying is taking place in commodities, with inflation as the spur; so long as the demand is there, the markets will be stimulated. Commodity prices are plainly on the make, an overdue development of our fiscal policy. Falling stock prices under such circumstances would at least be unusual, especially with such an abundance of cheap credit lying about.

To a certain degree the market is becoming one in which it may be said that the mongrels of today are the pedigreed pets of tomorrow. Many of the recently fast climbing shares subsided on profit taking, while others in the neglected class rose rapidly. Amusement shares fell back, Paramount being prominent, although Radio was a popular issue with the bulls. Low priced speculative issues made up a large part of the sales volume. Alleghany was a leader. Sparks Withington, Continental Baking B and American Type Founders had a busy day.

Ups and Downs.

Groups to show mixed price changes in a narrow range were the coppers, silvers, foods, motors, rails, rail equipments, merchants, chemicals, amusements, steels, auto accessories and tobaccos. Anaconda lost a point, but Kennecott moved up. National Biscuit was buoyant. Dairy shares weakened a little.

Chesapeake & Ohio held to only a part of its early gain. Great Northern fell back. Nickel Plate advanced. Pere Marquette prior preferred sprang forward more than 6 points on the big dividend distribution. Coast Line reached a new high price. Utilities were sluggish. Telephone reached a new high price at the start, but dropped after the regular dividend announcement.

Stocks to rise 1 to 5 points were Amerada, Atlas Powder, Bethlehem Steel preferred, Cannon Mills, Champion Paper & Fiber, Consolidation Coal preferred, Crown Cork, Eastman preferred, Grant and Owens Glass. Similar losses were taken in Case, Chesapeake Corporation, Continental Can, New York & Harlem and Paramount preferred.

For Stabilization.

As former head of the Bank for International Settlements, Leon Fraser speaks with authority on the problem of international trade and currency stabilization. He is listened to with equal respect in his capacity as a high officer of the First National Bank of New York, an institution not noted for snap judgments or publicity seeking. Addressing the National Foreign Trade Council today, Mr. Fraser outlined certain indispensable conditions for international monetary stabilization and suggested steps which this country should take.

First of all, he emphasized the necessity for making no further change in the dollar's gold content. He was optimistic enough to say that he believed that the dollar's gold content will not further be changed, and he was sufficiently aware of the European state of mind to suggest that, for trading purposes, it might be well, nevertheless, to continue the President's power to change the dollar's value. On that point some will disagree, holding that it would do more for stability if the legal authority to change the dollar's value were withdrawn, let Great Britain do what she pleased about it. However, the question is purely academic, for beyond any doubt the President will ask for and receive an extension of the power when Congress meets in January.

Six Steps.

Starting at that point, Mr. Fraser listed six conditions for effecting international currency stabilization. They are: (1) An expansion of foreign trade; (2) a balanced budget, national and State, which Mr. Fraser thinks need involve no deflation; (3) advoidance of inflation, and here again Mr. Fraser's optimism rises to the top; (4) writing off or adjusting the war debts; (5) refunding at a lower interest rate the German debt, and (6) co-operation in international economic affairs.

In view of the recent official references to foreign funds in our markets, Mr. Fraser's remarks on that score are significant. Referring to his third essential for currency stabilization, he says: "If we do not wish to drain the world's capital and render stabilization almost impossible, we must not permit the development of a runaway stock market. Nothing would be more helpful to this end than a drastic alteration of the capital gains tax."

Rock Island to Buy Six Zephyr Trains

Chicago, Nov. 18 (AP).—The Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad asked court approval today of a proposed purchase of six streamline trains. The trains, the management said, were "absolutely necessary" by next spring if the road is to compete with other lines.

Court approval is necessary because the company has filed a petition for reorganization under section 77b of the amended bankruptcy law. The purchase price, with 350 automobile freight cars also sought, would be approximately $3,396,000. The company has $850,000 cash and would raise $2,550,000 through the sale of equipment trust certificates.

Dividend Tide Rises to Nearly $500,000,000

Wage Increases in Many Industries Exceed $125,000,000.

By the Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 18.—American industry pushed the year-end dividend outflow toward the $500,000,000 mark today as 14 companies added more than $20,000,000 in extra payments to the Christmas purse of thousands of shareholders.

The ranks of workers participating in the golden torrent through wage increases and Christmas bonuses were augmented by more than 65,000 in textile, shoe and other industries. The widespread autumn movement previously had rolled up wage increases estimated at more than $125,000,000 annually for 1,200,000 workers.

A distribution of $600,000 for 30,000 workers by the International Shoe Co., with headquarters at St. Louis, helped lift the Christmas bonus total above $26,000,000. Lone Star Cement and Atlantic Greyhound Lines were other additions to the bonus list.

Twenty-one companies ordered payments amounting in all to about $65,000,000, including the $20,000,000 in expanded dividends in the year-end rush to distribute larger 1936 profits and avoid the Federal surtax upon undivided earnings. They raised the total for 120 companies to about $425,000,000 and put industry well on the way toward a new record for Christmas distributions.

Big Telephone Dividend.

Heading the day's list was a regular disbursement of $2.25 a share on the common, totaling $42,017,890 by American Telephone & Telegraph.

An extra dividend of $2 a share by Liggett & Myers Tobacco Co., St. Louis, contributed $3,136,939. Crown Cork & Seal added $1,111,860 with a special payment of $3 on the common.

Besides a bonus for workers, International Shoe declared an extra of 25 cents a share, amounting to $837,500, for 7,000 holders of its capital stock.

Coca-Cola International Corporation, which controls Coca-Cola Co., added $3,814,387 with an extra of $16 a share besides the regular $3.25 quarterly dividend.

Year-end payments by 20 big corporations rose above $230,000,000 with the inclusion of $1,505,958 by American Radiator & Standard Sanitary Corporation's 15 cent extra for 42,000 shareholders and a payment of $1 amounting to $3,106,817 by Westinghouse Airbrake.

Textile Wage Increases.

The cotton textile industry, employing 434,000 workers in the biggest business boom it has enjoyed in years, chimed in with more wage increase announcements in the North and South, averaging 10 per cent.

A general 10 per cent lift for the industry, it was figured, would add $27,000,000 to $30,000,000 annually to pay rolls at the current rate of operations.

The Atlantic Greyhound Lines, operating a widespread bus transportation system, announced that its employes would get a $75,000 Christmas bonus.

A 5-cent boost in hourly wages of 1,000 employes of the American Seating Co., Grand Rapids, Mich., will raise the pay roll $70,000 annually, officials said. Six hundred employes of the Hercules powder plant at New Brunswick, N. J., got increases ranging from 6 to 7 per cent. Among important textile announcements was one of the Fall River Cotton Manufacturers Association of a 10 per cent increase for 15,000 workers, effective November 30.

Today the record showed 91 of the larger and better known companies had declared a total of $403,991,760 in dividens. Extra and increased disbursements exceeded regular payments to stockholders, the former running to $206,741,313 and the latter to $197,250,447.

Koppers Bond Issue Is Oversubscribed

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Pittsburgh, Nov. 18.—Mellon Securities Corporation, heading the group underwriting $25,000,000 first mortgage and collateral trust Series A 4 per cent bonds of Koppers Co., announce that books are closed, the bonds having all been sold and the issue oversubscribed. No allotments were made on subscription.

The bonds were offered through dealers from coast to coast at par and were quoted today at 102⅛ bid, 102⅜ asked.

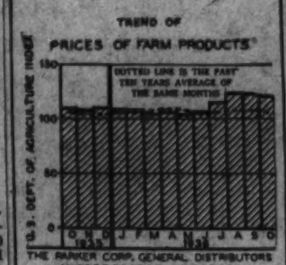
New York, Nov. 18 (AP).—The board of managers of the New York Cotton Exchange has elected Saul M. Meltzer, of Chicago, to membership. He is a member of the Chicago Board of Trade and the Commodity Exchange, Inc., of New York City.

Farm Cash Income Highest Since 1930



Boston, Mass., Nov. 18.—The prices of farm products have gone up 11 per cent during the past year. The October index stood at the highest for any October since 1929, and was up 14 per cent from the ten-year average. The Bureau of Agricultural Economics estimates that the total cash farm income for this year will be $7,850,000,000, or the highest total since 1930.

Cotton Is Lower With Liquidation

New York, Nov. 18 (AP).—Renewed liquidation, especially in December, caused cotton to turn easier today after early steadiness. March sold off from 11.75 to 11.63 and closed at the low with prices generally ending at net losses of 8 to 12 points.

Cottonseed Oil.

Cottonseed oil was steady today after advancing 8 to 9 points on covering of March and May and commission house buying, the market reacted under liquidation and closed unchanged to 4 points net higher. The late selling was encouraged by the easiness of cotton and the late setback in corn. Sales, 196 contracts. Oil Production This Year Seen AsAll-TimeTop

Expected to Pass Record of 1,007,323,000 Barrels in 1929.

The production of crude oil in the United States this year, in all probability, will top 1,100,000,000 barrels, thus establishing a new record and surpassing the previous peak output of 1,007,323,000 barrels for 1929.

For the first nine months this year crude output amounted to 814,051,000 barrels, an increase of 11.4 per cent over the 730,595,000 turned out in the corresponding period of 1935. For all of 1935 production amounted to 993,942,000 barrels.

Increased demand for petroleum products is principally responsible for larger production of crude. In the current year, to date, the demand for oil products has been running approximately 11 per cent higher than in 1935, or about the same rate of gain as shown for crude production.

Record Gasoline Demand.

Gasoline, the chief refined product of petroleum, this year has been in record demand. For the first nine months domestic consumption has taken 358,026,000 barrels against 321,465,000 in the similar period of 1935, an increase of 11.6 per cent. For all of 1936 it is likely that demand will approximate 465,000,000 barrels, which would compare with 434,897,000 in 1935.

That record demand for gasoline probably will continue for some time is evidenced by the substantial increase in sales of new cars. This factor, new car sales, plus the general improvement in business conditions, may tend to absorb so-called "excess" gasoline stocks which might otherwise be built up because of the necessity to turn out fuel oil.

Fuel oil demand, incidentally, is likely to register a new high record this year, possibly 425,000,000 barrels, an increase of 58,800,000 barrels compared with 1935. The record on demand for fuel oil, heavy and light, was 1929 when volume amounted to 415,156,000 barrels.

$23,500,000 Argentine 4½s Offered Today

External Conversion Loan Bonds Priced at 92½ Per Cent.

A group of investment banking houses headed by Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc., is offering today $23,500,000 sinking fund external conversion loan 4½ per cent bonds of the Argentine Government. They are due November 15, 1971, and are priced at 92½ per cent and interest.

The net proceeds of the sale are to be applied toward the retirement of $23,596,000 of the Argentine Government's external sinking fund 6 per cent gold bonds of 1924, series B, due in 1958. The greater part of the proceeds will be in cash and the remainder will be in such of the 6 per cent bonds due 1958 as may be accepted under the exchange offer being made in London under which these 6 per cent bonds may be exchanged for the new 4½ per cent issue.

The bonds are redeemable at the option of the Argentine Government as a whole or in part on any interest date on 30 days' notice, but in case of partial redemption only in amounts of not less than $5,000,000 if not for the sinking fund.

Associated with Morgan Stanley & Co., Inc. as underwriters are: The First Boston Corporation, Brown Harriman & Co., Inc., Edward B. Smith & Co., Blyth & Co., Inc., Lazard Freres & Co., Inc., Lee Higginson Corporation, Kidder, Peabody & Co., and White, Weld & Co.

Politics Won't Wreck Homes, Says Lady Astor

Hamilton, Bermuda, Nov. 18 (AP).—Bermuda housewives had learned something new about home-wrecking today from Lady Astor, American-born member of the British Parliament. Addressing an overflow audience on women's suffrage, Lady Astor declared:

"More homes are wrecked through women worrying about their clothes, pride and the comforts of their husbands than when they are interested in politics."

SYNOPSIS.

Becky Stern for several months has been carrying on her secretarial duties in the home of her employer, Francis Rhodes, who has been ill. Now that Mr. and Mrs. Rhodes have gone on a cruise, she has remained to act as secretary to Philip Rhodes, her regular employer's nephew who has recently returned to San Francisco after eight years in Mexico City. Philip has agreed to postpone opening his own architect's office until his uncle's return, so he may keep an eye on his madcap young cousin, Francis Junior, whose refusal to learn the business and tendency to drink has worried his father.

Francis Junior has attempted to make love to Becky and, finally fired by her coolness, has proposed to her and has been rejected. Becky has wished she could avoid him entirely, but that could only be by quitting and she has not dared to do that for two reasons—her father's job, now lost, had been uncertain and she loves Philip. Philip knows of Francis Junior's infatuation and appears to be amused; certainly he is not jealous. In fact, his own attention until very recently has been devoted to Lelia Meade, beautiful young widow, who had jilted him eight years before. She had been the reason for his return from Mexico, but he decides he has only been in love with his memory of her—and they break up. Regina Little, his cousin, upbraids him for throwing over Lelia.

CHAPTER 10.

Although Philip did not mention Regina's visit, a few days later Becky could see it had left an impression on him. He was more reserved than he had been before. His remarks were confined entirely to the business in hand, and Becky, who had learned to expect his rare smile as part of her morning greeting, was disappointed to find it missing. He treated her courteously but more formally. All the friendly intimacy between them seemed to have disappeared, as if, after thinking it over, he had decided to retreat into his shell.

In vain she made timid advances and little gestures calculated to reassure him. The old cynicism had returned to his face. The somber expression peered like a ghost from his black flecked eyes. A sort of spiritual loneliness descended on him which Becky's most determined effort could not pierce.

Even so, those hours in the library were still the most thrilling of her life. To be near him was a privilege and she thought in time he would recover from the cruelty of Regina's words and be himself again.

She did not know until Francis, jr., told her over the telephone that there was more than that to it.

"Gina blames you for coming between Lelia and Phil," he informed her. "They had a terrible row about it the other night. She threatened to go to you about it and he told her if she did he would take an office downtown.

Becky was trembling. Darling Philip, to come to her defense. No wonder he had been afraid to speak to her. He was probably so self conscious that he couldn't treat her naturally. Yet he would be willing to move into an office of his own rather than give her up. Of course, that might be merely to prove his point. Philip was not the kind of man to permit any woman, no matter how much he loved her, to dictate to him.

She went to work the next day, flushed and eager. Unable to resist smiling at him.

He replied to her gay greeting with a dignified "Good morning!"

"Why don't you call me Becky as you did before?" she challenged him.

Philip's eyes avoided hers.

"The situation seems to be causing so much comment," he admitted, "we can't afford to do or say anything which might be misunderstood."

"You mean you can't?"

"It's only for your sake," he said quickly. "So far as I am concerned it doesn't make any difference what any one says."

"Francis, jr., told me what you said to Mrs. Little," she confessed. "It think it was rather splendid of you."

Instead of being pleased by this remark he frowned.

"He shouldn't have repeated it. I'm sorry."

Be the Same.

"So am I, she said boldly," because it has made a difference between us. I've felt it for several days but I didn't know why."

He glanced at her as if he were studying her.

"Please be the way you were before," she begged, lifting her gray-green eyes.

"I don't know what you mean," he said, flushing. "I was not aware that I have changed. I told you in the beginning that I was completely disillusioned about all women. I never expect to fall in love again."

The statement seemed so completely uncalled for that Becky winced.

"Oh," she cried, as if he had struck her.

"I didn't mean to hurt your feelings," he apologized, "but we'd better understand each other. Women have such a way of deliberately misinterpreting my actions. Gina has made me realize that I've probably been misleading you . . ."

He looked entirely miserable but she had no sympathy for him now.

"You needn't worry about my misunderstanding anything you do or say," she stated angrily. "I don't even care to go on working for you if you think there's any danger of it."

"You've misunderstood now," he pleaded. "I was only trying to be frank. To state my position clearly."

"You have certainly done so," she agreed, "beyond the shadow of a doubt. So now that we both understand each other let's get down to business."

Escape.

He glanced at her from time to time as if unable to see why she should be so hurt but as for Becky her only desire was to live through that day and make her escape.

"I can take it," she said to herself. "But the worst of it is, he was right. I've probably gone around here looking at him as if I were moonstruck. That's why he felt it necessary to warn me." What peculiar specimens of her sex he must have known! Lelia, for instance, was lovely to look upon and seductive as any siren, but it was true she hadn't played fair with him. She had jilted him for another man whom she had afterward admitted she didn't love. Even so, was that any excuse for lumping all women into the same categroy?

Becky was so hurt about it that she told her parents that night.

"He must be dreadfully conceited," her mother said, relieved to know that it was possible for her daughter to find fault.

He isn't conceited at all," Becky denied.

"I may be able to get a position with a rival company," her father said. "When I do you'd better quit."

"But I don't want to quit," Becky objected.

Philip Calls.

She realized that she was being unreasonable, but she couldn't seem to help it. That night, soon after dinner, there was a ring at the front door. Jimmy answered it, returning to announce that a man wanted to see Becky. They were all sitting in the sitting room surrounded with magazines and the paper. Becky looked up amazed to see Philip.

Hat in hand, he said, "I'm very sorry to intrude upon you like this but I have an important letter which must be written in Spanish and mailed tonight."

The two men measured each other with frankly appraising glances. Becky was proud of her family. Her father, tall and distinguished looking, her mother in a striped silk which had been laundered many times but was smart and spotless. Jinny, her dark curls bound with a red ribbon and her stocky, sturdy twin.

When Becky had introduced Phil, her mother asked him to sit down, and, wonder of wonders, he accepted. It was Becky who reminded him of the letter.

"It must be typed as I want to keep a carbon copy," he stated. "Have you a typewriter?"

When she replied that they had not, he said: "I'll take you over to the house then if you don't mind. It's early and it will only take a few minutes to write it.

Outside, seated in his uncle's sedan which he was driving, Philip said: "I envy you your family, Becky."

"Becky?" she repeated perversely. "I thought we had decided to be more formal."

"That's what I really wanted to see you about," he admitted rashly. "I spoke more harshly than I intended to this morning. I can scarcely expect you to understand the reasons back of what I said. Will you take my word for it that there were some and try to forget the whole conversation?"

Reich Now Saving Old Razor Blades

Berlin, Nov. 18 (AP).—Germany's antiwaste drive has provided one solution to the knotty "what to do with old razor blades" problem.

Its answer is, "save them."

The third Reich believes 1,500,000,000 marks ($603,600,000) is wasted every year in food products and materials, and has adopted several measures to convert that waste into a savings.

Voluntary helpers are collecting every bit of scrap metal from households, even discarded containers and curtain rods. Nothing is too small, nothing too insignificant—not even old razor blades.

Virginia Governor's Grave Never Marked

Amelia, Va., Nov. 18 (AP).—There is no tombstone or marker of any kind at the grave of William Branch Giles, Governor of Virginia from 1826 to 1829, an attorney here notified the Virginia Conservation Commission today.

In fact, wrote J. G. Jefferson, jr., to the commission, "so far as I know, there is only one person living today who knows the location of Gov. Giles' grave. That is W. B. Taylor, of Mattoax."

The attorney said that the grave is on the Giles family tract, Wigwam, in Amelia County.

Gale Maroons Hunters.

Midland, Ontario, Nov. 18 (Canadian press).—More than 50 deer hunters were reported marooned today somewhere along the north shore of Georgian Bay by a howling gale, zero weather and mountainous waves. They were due back at their homes here and in Coldwater Sunday night.

Congress Library Architect Is Dead

Joseph Conradi, 89, sculptor and architect, designer of the Congressional Library, died Wednesday in Los Angeles, after a lengthy illness, the Associated Press reported.

A native of Berne, Switzerland, he studied art in Florence and Rome before coming to the United States 49 years ago to become an instructor in the Academy of Design in New York.

Another of his creations was the Doheny Memorial Library at the University of Southern California, Los Angeles. Funeral services will be held tomorrow morning in St. Vincent's Church, Los Angeles.

Fire Victim Dead.

Miss Irene Alden, 56, died in Emergency Hospital Wednesday of burns suffered when fire swept a two-story structure at 311 Park Row southwest September 17. She had no known relatives, police said.

U. S. Architects Observe Birthday

Strains of "My Wild Irish Rose" and "Sweet Adeline" from the throats of 151 members and friends of the Association of Federal Architects, reverberated in the Carlton Hotel Wednesday as the association held its ninth anniversary banquet.

A. L. Blakeslee, president of the group, reminisced of those days nine years ago when the organization was founded. Jere J. Crane also spoke.

W. E. Reynolds, assistant director of Procurement Division of the Treasury, received a medal from Blakeslee for the outstanding work done by his department in the past year. This award is made every year at the fall meeting.

The organization was founded in the old supervising architect's office of the Treasury, when James A. Wetmore, now retired, was acting supervising architect.
